HISTORICAL MEETING.

The citizens of this community are certainly favoured when given the opportunity of hearing the most excellent course of lectures which is being provided by our Historical Society this season.

On Friday evening Prof. G. H. Needler of the University of Toronto delivered a splendid lecture on "The German Empire and its people." He described more particularly the political complexion of the empire, beginning with an explanation of the arrangement of the different states and comparing them in size and administrative influence. He gave a fine description of the real governing powers of the Empire and carefully explained the origin of each and the part each was made to play in the actual work accomplished. His description of the Reichstag and its powers, gave his hearers new ideas as to the work that branch could do.

After dealing thoroughly with the government, Prof. Needler told of the University life. Perhaps this part of his lecture was the most entertaining from the layman's view point. Starting with the primary educational institutions and their strict disciplinary regulations, he told of the schools which compare with our Collegiate Institute and High Schools, and then told of the great contrast between methods in vogue in these schools and Universities. The freedom of the German University student in the questions which perplex our Canadian young people, particularly with regard to examinations, choice of courses and the selection of a University to attend, was all carefully explained by Prof. Needler and many of his hearers were surprised when told that there were practically no examinations, that students attended any university they cared to, that they have the privilege of attending one university, changing to another for a year more, finally taking their degree wherever or whenever they wished.

examinations, choice of courses and the selection of a University to attend, was all carefully explained by Prof. Needler and many of his hearers were surprised when told that there were practically no examinations, that students attended any university they cared to, that they have the privilege of attending one university, changing to another for a year more, finally taking their degree wherever or whenever they wished to providing they could attain the standard required by the University from which they asked a degree, and were able to satisfy the governing powers in the oral examinations of their fitness for the degree.

After dealing with this phase of his subject, Prof. Needler took up the question of the military requirements with which every German boy must comply. This careful explanation quite naturally led to a statement of the military position which the country at the present time, and the speaker closed his lecture with a few well chosen remarks about the relationship existing between the German empire and the rest of the world, particularly as it affects Great Britain. Prof. Needler was careful to explain that the views expressed were his own, but his views surely would leave the impression that he thought the Germans as a people were not for war with the English as a people, and that notwithstanding possible war scares from those in authority, in the end the people will rule.

Before the lecture of the evening, those present were entertained by an excellent paper written by Mr. Paul Stein of Denbigh and called "A story of the rear of Addington county." This paper gives a history of the German settlement at Denbigh. It will be printed at a later date. Miss Helen Grange kindly read the paper as Mr. Stein was unable to attend the meeting.

In his closing remarks the President of the Society thanked those who had done so much to make the evening a success. He announced that the next meeting would be held on March 18th, and that Prof. Morrison of Queens University would lecture that night on "Ireland and the Irish Question". The meeting closed with "God Save the King".

TOWN COUNCIL.

An adjourned meeting of the Town Council was held on Monday evening, for the purpose of considering offers for the town property, situated on the west side of Centre street.

Mayor Simpson occupied the chair, all the members being present.

Coun. Kimmerly, chairman of the Town Property Committee, placed before the council a written opinion from the town solicitor as to whether the council had the right to sell the said property. The substance of the solicitor's written opinion was that the council had the power to dispose of the property if they saw fit, particularly as the property in question had been purchased with town funds, and was not held in trust by the town.

Only one tender was received, that of Chas. Stevens, who offered $1500 for the town property now occupied by him as a wood yard and office.

On motion of Councillors Osborne and Hawley, the offer of Mr. Stevens was not accepted.

THE FEBRUARY ROD AND GUN.

The best side of the Canadian winter, the side that appeals to every inhabitant of our Dominion and countless numbers of our visitors—the snow-shoeing trips of the North, receives prominence in the February issue of Rod Gun in Canada, published by W. J. Taylor, Woodstock, Ont. A Canadian Snow-shoe Song and A Winter Hunt emphasise the glories of a season in which all Canadians rejoice. There is plenty of variety in the number in addition to these articles including big game stories, duck and goose shooting, camping, protective work, fishing, etc., and no sportsman, whatever may be his particular inclination, can feel himself neglected. An endeavor is made to cover the whole Dominion in the best possible way and that a large measure of success is achieved is shown by this issue of the Magazine. In addition to winter outings, spring, summer and fall expeditions are now planned and the experiences of others, given in the most pleasant manner in these pages, is not merely interesting but most helpful and of considerable advantage to all who seek to know more of the wonderful sporting advantages of our broad Dominion.

ENGLAND NEEDS A MAN

THE BRITISH EMPIRE IS IN DANGER.

Colonies Must be Held and Defended—Government Should Trust the People.

Socialist B. Atchford may not have the correct solution for the problem which faces England as the head of the British Empire. He certainly has an eloquent pen which makes his solution look like the only logical one while you are in the atmosphere of one of his articles.

The following article, from the London Daily Mail, deals with the conservation of the Empire. The following is what Mr. Blatchford has to say:—

Although I have often described myself as a Little Englander I have been cognizant of certain considerations which the more aggressive Little Englander seems commonly to ignore.

Granting that we got most of our Empire by robbery under arms—though often at the expense of less capable robbers who had got the booty in no honest way—granting that we had no moral right to snatch colonies from the French, the Dutch, the Spaniards, the Mohammedans, or the Zulus who had stolen them before us, there still remain several knotty questions to be answered before we hand over the stolen property to any other people.

COLONIES.

We cannot give Australia back to the aborigines, for we have civilized them off the face of the earth. If we gave New Zealand back to the Maoris we should simply be transferring it to Japan, America, or some European power.

If we have no right to our colonies, neither has any other foreign power.

And then, again, there is the question—Would any other power govern our colonies better than we, or leave them to govern themselves as fully as we?

CONCERNING SUBJECT RACES.

Now I have no doubt that in India and the other subject states our rule is full of imperfections. But would our retirement, in many cases, be an advantage or a disadvantage to the subject race? It is not a question only of the faults of British rule; it is a question also of the comparative virtues of British and other foreign rule.

If we left India, would the natives hold it? If Russia, or France, or Germany conquered India, would the Indians be better off or worse than they now are?

It has always seemed to me that we cannot abandon our colonies or dependencies; and that we might have to defend them against other foreign powers until we can make reasonably sure that our retirement will not expose them to worse evils than our own rule.

THEIR FREEDOM.

To give India to the Indians, Canada to the Canadians, and Egypt to the Egyptians, I for one am quite willing; when these peoples wish for and are fit for self-government and self-defence. But to atone for an injury by exposing our victim to a greater injury but a friend. I like Germany; but I love England, as a man loves his mother, or his wife, or his comrade, or his home.

And the Empire is in danger, and we are unready—and we need a man!

WOMEN IN BALLOONS.

Their Adventures Before the Aeroplane's Day.

The interest shown by women in aerial navigation in these days is no new thing. Women in the past have done their share in conquering the roadways of the air.

Mlle. Tible was the first Frenchwoman to make an ascent. On June 4, 1784, she went up in a balloon from Lyons and landed safely in Belfort. In the following year Mme. Hines and Mme. Luzarene in Paris and two French girls, the sisters Simennot, in London made successful ascents.

The first of the women whose daring was repaid by death was Mme. Blanchard, wife of a famous aeronaut. While sailing over Paris in a balloon on July 6, 1819, she set off a rocket, the balloon caught fire and she was killed by falling on a roof.

Mme. Rader in 1863 was caught in the ropes of her balloon and suffocated.

Among the attempts of women to conquer the air none was more exciting than that of Mrs. Stock, who in 1821 went up from London in company with the balloonist Harris. The journey continued without incident until an attempt was made to descend. Then the apparatus for emptying the balloon did not function properly and the gas escaped too rapidly.

Only lightening the car could save the two balloonists, and all the ballast had already been thrown out. Then Harris and Mrs. Stock looked at each other in the eye for a second. Then Harris threw himself from the car to save the life of the woman who had been brave enough to share his peril with him.

Mme. Flammarion, wife of the famous Camille, made a honeymoon trip with her husband in the month of August, 1874, and landed happily after fifteen hours at Spa. This successful example was followed by one tragic imitation when Giuseppe Charbonnet in 1893 started out from Milan with his bride and partners to make the journey to Paris.

The first day passed without accident. On the second day as the balloon was crossing the Alps it was caught in a whirlwind, met a snowstorm and fell more than a thousand feet in a few seconds. The storm drove the car from one rocky peak to another and dragged it over the glaciers until all the gas had escaped and the car was left on a mountain. It remained there all night, and the next day the four, with no implements and no protection against the cold, started to make the perilous descent.

A snowstorm was raging, and the young husband slipped into a crevasse and was dashed to death at the bottom. It was three days before the party found refuge in a hut.

Sarah Bernhardt made an ascent in 1875 with the painter Clarin and Goddard the balloonist.

RAILROAD MEN WANTED

BIG MARKET FOR THEM IN THE STATES AND CANADA.

Twice as Many Miles of Track Under Construction as Canada Had in 1867.

To keep recruiting the ranks of the great army of railroad employees in the United States is quite a task. This is the largest standing army in the world, with one possible exception, that of the Russian Government. The railroad army of the United States numbers about 1,600,000 men; the standing army of the Czar is supposed to be 1,200,000.

With an army of 1,000,000 or more the annual loss through illness, accidents, change of occupation, retirement, etc., is large, and for years the task of keeping the ranks recruited has not been the easiest the railroads have had to perform. Some years there has been a superabundance of employees, but in other years there has been a lack. With the constant increase in the mileage, requiring more men to operate and care for it, the demand for employees has increased.

Now comes Canada with a tremendous splurge in railway building, to create another market for the labor of railroad men. The railroad development of Canada in the thirty-one years that have passed since the Confederation of the Provinces under one Government in 1867 has been unequalled except in the development of the railway building in the United States. In 1867 in all of Canada there were just 2,278 miles of railway track.

During the year 1903 the new track constructed equaled about one-fourth the entire mileage of 1867; in 1903 the new mileage totalled 614 miles. There have been constructed during 1909 or are under construction or contract nearly twice as many miles of track as there were in Canada in 1868, or 4,327 miles.

PLACES FOR THOUSANDS.

When more than 4,000 miles of railway are added to a country's system in one year it means places for thousands of workers, and the competent railway men in Canada have not developed in numbers large enough to supply the want. The people themselves have not realized how rapidly the work has grown.

Canada's entire railway mileage is now about 23,000 miles, which is one mile to every 300 inhabitants, as compared with one mile for each 381 inhabitants in the United States, one mile to every 1,821 persons in Great Britain, and one mile to every 1,590 in France.

Canada has nearly twice as many miles of railway as has Australia, more than twice as many as Italy, as many as Great Britain, nearly twice as many as Mexico, almost as many as the Austrian Empire, three times as many as Spain, three-fourths as many as France, two-thirds as many as the German Empire, and more than one-half as many as Russia. Canada has about one-tenth the railway mileage that the United States has; but its mileage is greater than that of all South America.

Many miles of railway track even

AT HIS MAJESTY'S TABLE

HOW THE KING'S KITCHEN KING WORKS.

There are Many Dishes Which Can be Tasted Only at the Royal Table.

Mr. Menager, the head cook at Buckingham Palace, occupies an important post in the Royal household. His salary is £2,000 per annum, and he is recognized as being one of the greatest culinary artists in the world. The Royal kitchens and the whole kitchen staff are under his complete control, says London Answers.

Opening off the main kitchen at one side of it are half a dozen smaller kitchens, and on the other side there are four offices, where the clerical work in connection with the kitchen department is attended to. One of these offices is Mr. Menager's private room.

Mr. Menager does not live in Buckingham Palace, but has his private residence close to it. On arriving at the Palace—usually about eleven o'clock in the morning—his first care is to inspect the lunch menu for that day, which has been prepared by his first assistant, and also the menu for breakfast the following morning. He then prepares the dinner menu for the following day—a task that occupies him usually a couple of hours.

SAUCE THE KING LIKES.

No two dinners at the Royal table are ever the same. Certain dishes are from time to time repeated, frequently by special request of the King, but what may be termed the general scheme of each dinner is always different. One of the side kitchens is reserved solely for Mr. Menager's use, where he carries out experimental culinary operations, and is constantly elaborating and working out new ideas. Some dishes have taken him months of preparation before he has decided to put them into the menu. There is one particular sauce which Mr. Menager invented some years ago to which the King has a particular liking. Mr. Menager was making experiments for over three years before he served this sauce to the Royal table.

The secret of many dishes is known only to Mr. Menager, and he guards such secrets with great care. None of his assistants have the least notion of how these special dishes and sauces are prepared. They simply have the handling of the raw materials, and each assistant carries out different directions in its preparation for table.

The dinner menu is submitted every day to their Majesties for approval; but this is a mere matter of form, for neither the King nor Queen ever think of altering or interfering with Mr. Menager's arrangements.

PREPARING A ROYAL DINNER.

At three o'clock a report is laid before the great chief by the order-clerk of the various meats that have been ordered in accordance with Mr. Menager's instructions of the day before, and also what is called a kitchen report is given to him by the head assistant cook—which is a detailed statement of the dinner to which the dinner for

A COMPARISON.

Let us be just, even to our own country. The Belgians in the Congo State, the Germans in Poland, the Spaniards in Cuba, the Russians in all their dependencies, do not seem to have improved on British methods, imperfect though our methods may be. The Japanese in Korea, the French and Spaniards in Morocco, do not seem to have inspired much love or confidence in the native breast. Give up India! To whom? And how? And why?

Improve the government of India! Certainly. And while we are about it we might do a little for England.

DON'T TRUST PEOPLE.

We might trust our people more, and educate them better, and exploit them less. Then perhaps they would be more willing to trust their rulers than they now are. Then, perhaps, our ruling classes would not be afraid to do their duty for fear of the public wrath.

DO ANTS THINK?

Lord Avebury Maintains That They Do.

Although Mr. Henry Hill at the London Institution last week would not allow ants any higher quality than that of "insect," Lord Avebury sees no reason to alter the conclusions at which he arrived thirty years ago, after many careful experiments. He still believes that these insects have "the gift of reason."

"I have not studied ants for many years," said Lord Avebury, "but I hope to renew my experiments before long, and I still adhere to the conclusions which you will find in my book on 'Ants, Bees and Wasps.' In that work I said:—'When we see an ant-hill, tenanted by thousands of industrious inhabitants, excavating chambers, forming tunnels, making roads, guarding their home, gathering food, feeding the young, tending their domestic animals, each one fulfilling its duties industriously and without confusion it is difficult altogether to deny to them the gift of reason, and the preceding observations tend to confirm the opinion that their mental powers differ from those of man not so much in kind as in degree.'"

Many miles of railway track, even though they represent an investment of nearly $60,000 per mile, would be of little consequence to the worker if they were not operated. In 1895 the total number of passengers carried was 31,001,992, which was double the number carried ten years ago. The freight traffic amounted to 63,051,167 tons, or three times the amount carried twelve years ago. The figures for 1909 are expected to be greatly increased.

A MATHEMATICAL PRODIGY.

Ten-Year-Old Astonishes Grave and Thoughtful Professors.

A boy prodigy with alleged marvellous powers of mathematical divination has been discovered in New England in the person of William James Sidis, the ten-year-old son of the professor of psychology at Harvard University.

A year ago little Sidis, whose father had trained him according to a unique "system," was admitted as an undergraduate to the university. The other evening the boy—in everything but his know-

After seeing that everything is in order for the evening's work, Mr. Menager generally leaves the Palace about four o'clock, returning at half-past six, when he never fails to make a personal inspection of the various ranges, ovens, and stoves, and takes a careful note of the temperature in each.

The preparation of the Royal dinner is then begun. Mr. Menager remains in the kitchen, whilst the work is going forward, keeping a keen eye on everything and everyone, and issuing from time to time instructions to his first lieutenant. At ten minutes to nine exactly a bell is rung, and the servants who are to bear the dishes to the State dining-room enter the kitchen.

At nine o'clock dinner is served, and Mr. Menager's work for the day is over. He remains in his private room until ten o'clock, when he receives a message from the King commending the dinner. This is a ceremony his Majesty never forgets to perform.

FROM 'VARSITY TO RUIN THE JEWS IN PALESTINE RETURN TO BARBARISM

PATHOS AND TRAGEDY OF SOME PROMISING CAREERS

Men With Bright Prospects in Life Sink to Its Lowest Depths.

The record—could one be kept—of the after-lives of the 2,000 'Varsity men who leave Oxford and Cambridge every year would be a document containing as much romance as a score of novels, says London Answers. Many of these men reach the highest positions life has to offer, many sink to its lowest depths.

At present, there is an Oxford M.A. acting as conductor of a suburban 'bus. No one but himself knows his real name, or his story. Passengers occasionally notice in his accent the tones of a cultured man, but to the eye he is, in dress and appearance, an ordinary 'bus conductor.

RELENTLESS FATE.

A few years ago, in a street near the docks, there stood daily a shabby man selling wheelks. That man had been one of the highest Wranglers of his year at Cambridge. He got into trouble soon after leaving the 'Varsity, and was disowned by his family. For a time he acted as an assistant master in a grammar school. His disgrace followed him, and drove him from that employment. He could obtain no other, and before long the pressure of starvation had brought him down to the level of the outcast.

The writer, in his own undergraduate days, saw, one cold winter night, a miserable figure shivering outside the leading University hotel, just then brilliantly lighted, and full of noisy parties of undergraduates. The man was in the last stages of a fatal disease. He entered the hotel, and asked to see a member of one of the parties dining within. It was then he told his wretched story, afterwards, in many particulars, confirmed. Twenty years before, he himself had been among the most rollicking of the careless undergraduates who used to make merry in that very hotel. On leaving the University he had lost his money and gone abroad, but had returned home to die.

The traveller who alights from a train at a certain lonely station on the West Australian goldfields will find a ramshackle cart waiting to convey him to the local "hotel." Its driver, with his ragged beard and sun-baked face, looks like a rather bad specimen of the "sundowner." Fifteen years ago, however, he was a Cambridge "blood," who ran his racing stud at Newmarket and sleepchased at Coton. Racing ruined him; his friends cast him off. He got together enough money to emigrate to the goldfields, had bad luck there, and now drives the hotel 'bus.

PRACTICAL PROGRESS OF ZIONISTS RECENTLY.

Jerusalem Essentially a Jewish Town—Business Monopolized by Them.

Despatches from Jerusalem tell of remarkable strides made during the last few years in the re-peopling of Palestine with Jews. The proclamation of the constitution in Turkey threw open the doors of Palestine and led to an enormous influx of Jewish colonists, who are already settled on some of the best lands of the country.

In Jerusalem alone four-fifths of the population now belongs to the Jewish faith. Large tracts of land around Lake Tiberias have been bought up from poor natives and converted into prosperous farms. The Plain of Sharon, between Jaffa and Lydda, is owned and tended by Jewish skill and labor. The Hauran, one of the most fertile wheat districts in the world, is being sold to Jewish syndicates.

Almost the whole of the extensive Plain of Esdraelon has been bought up by Jews. Their prosperous colonies spread from Dan to Beer-sheba, and even further south to the outskirts of Egypt. Thousands are escaping from Persia to find shelter and protection in the Holy Land, while every ship from Odesa carries some of them.

The Jordan Valley, once the property of the ex-Sultan Abdul Hamid, is being eagerly sought after by Jewish capitalists. The Zionists, whose agents are distributed all over the land, are buying up the rich properties of the Mohammedan effendis, whose incomes since the revolution have lessened.

At Jaffa, Tiberias, Safed and Haifa (Mount Carmel) Jews are reckoned by tens of thousands. Towns like Remoth-Gilead, Bethlehem, Nazareth and Gaza, where a few years ago no Jew dared show his face, have now their Jewish quarters and synagogues.

The whole city of Jerusalem is essentially a Jewish town. Banking as well as trade and commerce is monopolized by Jews. The Government has found it necessary to organize a company of JEWS GENDARMES.

Hundreds of thousands of pounds are annually sent from Europe and America to enable the colonists to build homes, hospitals, schools and invalid homes. Over one hundred Jewish schools already exist in Jerusalem alone. Synagogues are rising up everywhere.

The value of the land has risen fourfold. The ignorant and poverty-stricken fellahien (peasants) are being ousted from their homes and villages by the European Jew settler, whose modern agricultural implements and methods have made the land produce harvests never dreamed of by the natives. The Anglo-Palestine Company, a Zionist banking and commercial enterprise, is pushing the cause of Israel with energy.

AMERICAN LAND OF GLUTTONS?

WOMEN TORTURE THEMSELVES FOR BEAUTY.

Masks, Thumb Screws, Finger Clamps, Bandages on Hands, are Worn.

Read here of a few of the practices of the enlightened women of fashion of Christendom and the methods they take to make themselves more beautiful in the eyes of their lords, or others.

Quite a striking new device is a face and neck mask for removing wrinkles. Stretching the skin tight, our lady places strips of adhesive plaster upon it, the idea, of course, being to draw the skin tight. Over these strips goes a mask, the inside of which is lined with still other adhesive strips.

LIKE IRON MASK.

The wearer starts to bed, presumably to rest, despite the fact that this instrument, uncomfortable as the Iron Mask of history, is glued tightly to her forehead and pressed closely about chin and neck. The theory, of course, is that the wrinkles are wiped out. No count is taken of those pressed in by the contrivance or the unhygienic effect of lack of ventilation for the skin and pressure upon the throat. Throat diseases from this fad are quite frequent.

APPLY THUMB SCREW.

The thumb screw was invented as an instrument of torture to wring from wretched persons the secrets they were trying to keep, yet women now apply the thumb screw to themselves, because it is the method of the moment to make the fingers taper to a delicate point.

The finger clamps look like clumsy thumbles. But they are literally thumb screws. A screw gives them an extra turn, crushing the flesh, torturing the nerves and pinching the bones yet more.

INJURY TO FINGERS.

If not alone the finger tip but the entire finger is too thick and fleshy to please the wearer, or to bear favorable comparison with the hands of her friends, she ties tightly around them muslin bandages that are guaranteed to stop the circulation and cause atrophy of the fingers. When she removes the cloth the fingers do look smaller and whiter to be sure. Of the injury to the fingers and to the health she does not think, nor thinking, care.

TO MAKE HAND SMALLER.

To make the hand smaller women will tie bandages tightly around it, arresting the circulation in the whole hand just as it is arrested in the finger. The hand is thus made to look smaller, and it is smaller, but for the same reason that a paralyzed limb grows shrivelled. The effect is the result of impoverished circulation, and in the end outraged nature pays back. The hand treated thus will grow yellow and old far in advance of the time it should naturally grow so. Palsy is known to have occurred from this practice of bandaging, which, by the way, is also applied to the feet and even the calves of the leg. In the latter case very evil results

The Farm

FARM NOTES.

Bones (up to 400 pounds per acre) are best when they have been steamed or boiled, since the fat is mostly removed thereby. Should be in a very fine dust, the finer the better, and applied some time before needed.

Any corn-raiser who pays particular attention to a variety of corn that will shell out a large percentage knows the importance of securing a variety that is heavy, and with the kernels compact on the cob. Such an ear will shell out from 90 to 92 per cent.

Many farmers who grow minimum crops of wheat without profit year after year, would find more profit in rye. Such wheat crops are grown on thin, exhausted or wet lands. Rye would on such lands be a more certain crop, and harvested by the live-stock would give some return and could be made a means of improving the land. On wet land it is the more certain of the two, as it will not winterkill, and the return it gives the farmer is not absorbed by the labor bill.

At the Maryland experiment station careful trials in growing potatoes showed that deep cultivation not too often repeated gave the best yield; that seed for early planting kept in cold storage produced no better results than that kept in good cellars; seed with strong sprouts gave 126 bushels against 38 bushels from weak sprouts, while the seed end of potatoes yielded better results than the stem end of 22 to 40 bushels. The superior value of new seed was clearly proven as well as the importance of healthy seed over even slightly diseased tubers. Spraying with Bordeaux mixture six times produced better results than spraying four times.

LIVE STOCK NOTES.

Cleanliness in winter is probably more necessary than in summer, from the fact that fowls are obliged on account of the much longer nights and many severe days, to spend more time in the lofts.

The model farm horse should possess size and strength in order that he may move large loads. He should be quick in some degree or the ox would answer the purpose. He should be a fair traveller. He should be gentle, handy, and of good appearance.

The well-bred, high producing cow is more sensitive to her surroundings than the most delicately constructed machinery and is greatly affected by slight causes. A cow in a herd that, under personal care, produced over 600 pounds of butter and 10,000 pounds of milk in a year, when placed under the care of another and equally well fed, dropped off to about one half that amount and on her return to her own stable came back to her former production.

It is not only possible to start with common cows as a foundation, and build up a good herd of beef cattle, but it is one of the best moves that the average farmer can make, providing, of course, he has the common cows to begin with.

SUBMERGED ROMANCE.

Sometimes the lost 'Varsity man has become so from choice rather than compulsion. In a lonely part of the Rockies, wandering hunters sometimes see two desperate-looking figures in sun-tanned buckskin shirts of unskilled manufacture. They look like horse-thieves. Really they are cultured English gentlemen, with an extensive knowledge of ancient Greek, who are merely living the life which happens to appeal to them more than any other. They left the 'Varsity with very little patrimony to support them, and, being unwilling to face the routine drudgery of a school-master's life, they realized their small capital, vent over to America, and there, in a lonely part of the great mountain chain, they built, with their own hands, a small hut. They support themselves entirely by their guns, and their only contact with their fellowmen is on the three occasions in the year when they take their single pack-horse, and make the seventy-mile journey to the nearest town to replenish their stock of cartridges.

Another 'Varsity nomad owns a castle in Scotland and considerable property in Devonshire. He refuses, however, to live on either estate, and spends his time wandering about the world as sailor, engineer, explorer, or in any other capacity that presents itself.

Many of the most remarkable stories of submerged 'Varsity men will never be written, for the simple reason that they are known to none but the subjects of them, and will consequently die with their miserable possessors.

BANKING AT HOME.

Miniature Money Safes for the Small Depositor.

The British Post-office Savings Bank authorities have received a large number of replies to the circulars distributed among depositors requesting them to assist the Department by conducting their business with as few separate transactions as possible.

An interesting device which should tend to further economy in the administration of the Savings Bank has been brought before the notice of the authorities by Mr. F. J. Howell, of the Bankers' Service Corporation, Limited. This contrivance is a small steel money box, resembling a miniature safe and similar to those already used by a number of trustee savings banks in England and America.

It has been suggested to the Comptroller that by distributing these boxes the Savings Bank would escape a large number of ridiculously small deposits and withdrawals which prove so heavy a tax on the Department under existing conditions. They are so contrived that it is impossible to extract any coin from them, thereby removing any temptation to fall away from grace once a few shillings have been saved. The key of each box would be retained by the bank officials, who would open it in the presence of the depositor and place to his credit the amount contained in the safe.

Better a budding genius than a blooming idiot.

AMERICA LAND OF GLUTTONS?

Clergyman Says Country is Following Footsteps of Rome.

Rev. Madison C. Peters of New York, recently gave the following scathing rebuke to his countrymen: "Is America becoming a land of sensualists and gluttons whose only joys lie in the delights of the table and the appeasements of the animal cravings?"

The present high rate of living, the riotous surfeiting in costly dishes, the waste that follows in the wake of partial consumption, the increase of drunkenness, as proved by statistics, especially among the wealthy classes and notably in the case of women—all go to give an affirmative answer to the question.

The gourmands of Rome with their epicurean tables, tolled the death-knell of the mighty empire.

Gluttony is sapping the vitality of Americans. Lucullan feasts are hourly spread in the homes of the rich, while the tables of restaurants, cafes and hotels groan with delicacies, luxuries and vintages brought from the four corners of earth.

Is America eating and drinking itself to death as Rome did? Will gluttony enervate and sap its vital energies and dull its brain? Will it strip the brow of fair America of the diadem of nationhood? The men who placed that diadem there were men of abstemious habits and austere lives. They denied rather than indulged, they kept down the animal in them for the sake of the spiritual, they conquered the flesh, and as a consequence they were able to conquer their enemies. They were men of mind and soul, not of palate and stomach.

VINDICTIVE WILLS.

A Man Left His Wife the Sum of One Farthing.

Vindictive wills are not very common, and it is seldom that women reveal such a curious form of spite.

An English railway official who died recently left £202, and made some sore remarks against an acquaintance of his, stating in his will that:

"My estate would have been considerably larger if it had not been for my association with this perambulating human vinegar-cruet, and the cleverest known legal day-light robber."

The man must have been very "sour" who, a few years ago, left his wife the sum of one farthing and asked his executors to send this coin to her by post in an unstamped envelope.

Only last year a man left a very large sum of money to a Miss —, providing she never married.

Of course, this wealthy young lady soon fell in love, and when the happy day was publicly announced the will was contested.

Nevertheless, Miss — won the day, for the contention, that such a bequest and its condition were against the interests of England was upheld.

WHEN STANLEY QAILED.

Dinner Flatteries Too Much for the Man of Iron.

"Before I met Henry M. Stanley," says William H. Rideing in McClure's, "I had talked with men who had been under him in his African expeditions, and all they told me about him was more or less appalling.

"He was not inhuman, but in desperate straits he spared neither man nor beast, nor would he defer to the counsel or the pleas of others or have any patience with less than instant and unquestioning obedience to his orders under all circumstances. He would not forbear under arguments or excuses or relax his severity by any familiarity or pleasantries, even when his object had been gained. He was both despot and martinet; stern, exacting, uncompromising, silent, humorless, inscrutable. Cromwellian.

"I cannot say we loved him," one of his lieutenants said to me; "we were all afraid of him, but we all believed in him. When he hadn't his rifle in hand he had his Bible, and no matter where our camp was or how long and distressing our march had been he never missed his bath and shave in the morning."

This aspect of the explorer was very different from that which he showed to the guests at a dinner which the Papyrus Club of Boston gave in his honor.

"Whether he sat or stood," says Mr. Rideing, "he fidgeted and answered in monosyllables, not because he was unamiable or unappreciative but because he—this man of iron, whose word in the field brooked no contradiction or evasion, he who defied obstacles and danger and pierced the heart of darkness—was bashful even in the company of fellow craftsmen.

"His embarrassment grew when after dinner the chairman eulogized him to the audience: he squirmed and averted his face as cheer after cheer confirmed the speaker's rhetorical ebullience of praise. 'Gentlemen, I introduce to you Mr. Stanley, who,' &c.

"The hero stood up slowly, painfully, reluctantly, and with a gesture of deprecation fumbled in first one and then another of his pockets without finding what he sought. It was supposed that he was looking for his notes, and more applause took the edge off the delay.

"His mouth twitched without speech for another awkward minute before, with a more erect bearing, he produced the object of his search and put it on his head. It was not paper, but a rag of a cap, and with that on he faced the company as one who by that act had done all that could be expected of him, and made further acknowledgment of the honors he had received superfluous. It was a cap that Livingstone had worn and that Livingstone had given him."

and on her return to her own stable came back to her former production.

It is not only possible to start with common cows as a foundation, and build up a good herd of beef cattle, but it is one of the best moves that the average farmer can make, providing, of course, he has the common cows to begin with. We should advocate building up the herd every time from common stock, so that one would gain experience while making improvements. Place the average man without experience in possession of a fine herd, and he will in most cases abuse it through ignorance. If a man cannot breed carefully enough to build up a herd he cannot handle fine-bred animals well enough to keep them up to their standard. If there is going to be any failure it is better to have it out with the common herd so the loss will be less.

CONCERNING MILK.

There is no article of food produced that is more perishable than milk or cream, says Hoard's Dairyman. Many things improve with age, but milk is at its best immediately after drawn from the udder of the cow. The longer it is kept after this the poorer it becomes in quality no matter how carefully it has been produced. It therefore becomes necessary that in order to produce the best quality of butter cream should be delivered more than once a week to the creamery.

H. J. Credicott says in reference to this point: If we wish to make a good quality of butter we must have the cream delivered to the creamery while it is still sweet and fresh in flavor. We have no method which will turn bad flavored cream into good butter. I have received many letters from butter-makers stating that the cream was a week or more old before it reached the creamery. There is no butter-maker living who can make a good butter from such cream. The creamery patrons must deliver their cream more often if they expect the butter-maker to make good butter.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

For a change, instead of using onion in your corned beef hash, add a couple of green peppers that have been boiled five minutes and chopped fine.

Boiled salad dressing will not curdle, but will be smooth and light if stirred frequently while cooking in a double boiler, with a revolving egg beater.

In blacking a stove use a paint brush to apply the blacking. You can get in all the creases on the stove and not soil the hands. Then polish with stove brush.

Melted paraffin poured over the cut surface of a ham will keep the outside slice fresh and free from mold. The paraffin may be melted and used several times.

To beat bread sponge quickly use a large size egg beater. It does the same work as a machine and is quickly cleaned, will also save work in mixing cake batter.

Two teaspoonfuls of melted peanut butter added to potato cream soup, cream of corn soup or to many of the other vegetable soups gives a new and appetizing flavor.

Every time we see a sponge it reminds us of some men we know.

OVER 150 PERSONS PERISH

Passenger Steamer From Marseilles to Algiers Wrecked.

A despatch from Palma, Island of Majorca, says: Swept helplessly from her course in one of the wildest storms that has swept the Mediterranean Sea in forty years, the French Transatlantic Steamship Company's steamer General Chanzy crashed at full speed, in the dead of night, on treacherous reefs near the Island of Minorca, and all but one of the 157 souls on board perished.

The sole survivor is an Algerian customs officer, Marcel Rodet, who was rescued by a fisherman and lies at present in the hospital at Ciudadela, raving, as a result of the tortures through which he passed, and unable to give an account of the disaster.

Of the ship's company there were 87 passengers, of whom 30 were in the first cabin. The crew numbered 70. The ship was in command of Captain Cayol, one of the most careful officers of the line. He never before had met with an accident. He soon was to have retired from the service.

The passengers of the Chanzy were mostly French officers and of families returning to their posts in Algeria, accompanied by their wives and children, a few soldiers, some Italians and Turks, and one priest. The only Anglo-Saxon names on the passenger list were Green and Stakely. They were members of an opera troupe of eleven which had been engaged to sing at the Casino in Algiers.

The General Chanzy sailed from Marseilles on Wednesday at noon, and was due to arrive at Algiers on Thursday afternoon.

The Chanzy is a total wreck. Steamers have been despatched from Spain and from points in the Balearic Islands to the scene of the catastrophe. Among the victims was the celebrated Parisian music hall singer, Francis Dufor, as well as other prominent music hall favorites.

The General Chanzy struck at 9 o'clock Thursday night. Other ships in the neighborhood had safely outridden the storm, but the Chanzy was lifted off her course through the Balearic Archipelago and brought up on the coast of Minorca, in the vicinity of Ciudadela. Fishermen at daybreak picked up Rodet clinging to a piece of wreckage.

a good speed even when driven in the teeth of a stiff breeze. The new machine is many times greater in size than its predecessors, being 150 feet in length with pointed ends and having fin-like projections on either side. Framework extends below the body for about three-fourths of its length. The propellers are attached to its sides.

MRS. JAMES FENWICK

Enterprise, Ont., October 1st, 1908. "I suffered tortures for seven long years from a Water Tumor. I was forced to take morphia constantly to relieve the awful pains, and I wanted to die to get relief. The doctors gave me up and my friends hourly expected my death. Then I was induced to take 'Fruit-a-tives' and this wonderful fruit medicine has completely cured me. When I appeared on the street again my friends exclaimed 'The dead has come to life.' RAN TO HIS DEATH.

Live Wire Killed One Man and Injured Two.

A despatch from Vancouver, B. C., says: In a desperate flight from a deadly glare flash of nearly thirty thousand volts in the street railway transmission tower at Barnett on Wednesday night, Lee Weaver, aged thirty, was killed, and J. Dempster and H. Smith injured. The three men were making certain repairs on the dead line in the tower when another line thirty feet away used to carry electricity to the city broke. Terrified by the blinding brilliance of the arc formed by the current between the ends severed the wiremen rushed for the tower door. At the door they touched the corrugated iron sheeting of the tower, which had become heavily charged. Weaver was electrocuted instantly, and the work on the tower set on fire.

FREEZES GERMS TO DEATH.

Philadelphia Doctor's Method of Treating Cancer.

A despatch from Philadelphia says: A new method of treating cancer of the skin by freezing was demonstrated to Philadelphia physicians on Wednesday by Dr. Ralph Perlmutter, who has been practising for two years what he asserts is an original method of treatment. Liquid air has been used for experimentation before, but Dr. Perlmutter's method of using solidified carbon dioxide is said to be unique. He produced at the meeting of the Tri-county Medical Society a number of cases and made clinical demonstrations with the freezing mixture. The parts were frozen from three to five minutes. This process, it is asserted, kills the cancer germs. At intervals of three weeks the operation is repeated.

HEALTH

SKIN TROUBLES.

It is natural that persons with delicate, thin skins should suffer more or less discomfort in the winter; and when to a delicate skin is added a poor general circulation, the suffering may become a serious matter.

Much may be done to reduce this suffering to a minimum, in the case of persons who are not obliged to expose themselves to the elements in all weather, and even those who are much exposed may help their condition by observing a few simple rules.

The greatest annoyance in damp, cold countries, in England, especially—is the chilblain. In most parts of America the very cold weather is also dry, and this particular horror does not flourish. The hands and feet are the parts most generally affected by chilblain, which is a sort of miniature frost bite. The intolerable itching which is associated with it is one of the most trying symptoms. It often leads to such vigorous scratching that the skin is broken, and ulceration results. But with the warm and dry American domicile there need not be great fear of this particular form of skin trouble.

Some persons always develop skin troubles in a prolonged spell of very cold weather, and all very delicate skins will suffer from harsh and biting cold winds. Persons who are subject to any form of eczema are especially liable to an attack in cold weather.

Some persons always develop skin troubles in a prolonged spell of very cold weather, and all very delicate skins will suffer from harsh and biting cold winds. Persons who are subject to any form of eczema are especially liable to an attack in cold weather.

There are many simple precautions which no one of ordinary intelligence should neglect. Take, for example, the simplest form of all—cold weather skin bothers—chapped hands. Many persons will say, "My hands always chap dreadfully in cold weather," and if cross-examined these same people seem to regard the chapping as an inevitable condition from which there is no escape. Let such persons try the following simple treatment: Never wash the hands in very cold or very hot water. Use a simple, pure, superfatted soap, dry very thoroughly, and apply some emollient—the old-fashioned glycerin and rose-water will often work as well as anything. In some cases it will be better not to use soap in any form and to substitute oatmeal. The hands should always be well-covered when in the open air. If to this is added proper exercise, in order that the circulation may be good, there will be no chapped hands.

The same rules apply to the face and to the skin generally—thorough protection by the clothing, care in bathing, with the use of an emollient all the time, and a good general circulation.—Youth's Companion.

A MILITARY AIRSHIP.

Launch of Huge Craft for Use of British Army.

A despatch from London says: The British army appears at last to have secured a workable airship after many false starts. Manned by Col. Capper and four assistants, the huge fish-shaped craft was launched from the Military Balloon factory at Farnborough on Saturday. An hour was occupied in a flight over Ladin's Plain to Aldershot Camp, and back to its shed. The airship travelled several hundred feet above the highest points passed over and appeared to answer its helm perfectly. It seemed to be under thorough control throughout the trip and maintained

TRAIN STRUCK HANDCAR.

Three Railway Men Hurt Near Bying Inlet.

A despatch from Sudbury says: Albert Hodgman, foreman, with two sectionmen, Tiklena and Crieur, trackmen on the Toronto-Sudbury branch of the C. P. R. between French and Bying Inlet, while returning from Bying Inlet on Thursday afternoon ran into the Toronto Sudbury local train before they noticed it. Their jigger was smashed to pieces. Hodgman was severely bruised about the head, and Tiklena's jaw broken and his scalp injured. Crieur was cut about the face and his back injured. Crieur managed to jump before the collision came, but was hit with flying debris. All three were brought to Sudbury General Hospital on the train. All are expected to recover.

BOILER KILLED SIX MEN.

Exploded While They Were Warming Themselves About It.

A despatch from Bay City, Mich., says: While a score of workmen were warming themselves in the boiler room of Prince's sawmill at Grunipia on Thursday waiting for the whistle to start the day's work, the boiler exploded, instantly killing six of the men and injuring all the others. The mill was wrecked, debris being scattered 100 feet in every direction. It is believed that cold water was forced into the boiler when the water was low, causing an excess of steam.

SEEN IN PARIS SHOPS.

Jebelines are still immensely popular. Gaudy stockings are being worn again. Green is unrivaled in popularity. Most of the new linen suits are lace trimmed. Many of the new Swisses have embroidered colored dots. A new fad is the handbag made of cloth to match the suit. Bedford cord is again in fashion, though much softer in weave.

RUSSIAN EGGS COMPETE.

A Consignment of Six Thousand Dozen Received in Montreal.

A despatch from Montreal says: Montrealers will have an opportunity of judging what kind of hen fruit the poultry yards of Russia can produce, as a consignment of 6,000 dozen eggs has been received here from Riga, Russia. Strange as it may seem, these eggs can be brought approximately 5,000 miles at a price to compete with the local eggs. It is believed to be the first time a commercial transaction of this nature has taken place, but there have been previous instances of foodstuffs being brought from abroad at a time when the local prices were extremely high. Butter has been shipped to England and reimported before now owing to the scarcity of the product and consequent high prices.

FELL INTO THE TURBINE.

Edward Keho Killed at Niagara Falls.

A despatch from Niagara Falls says: Falling into the forebay of No. 1 plant of the Niagara Falls Power Company, Edward Keho, aged 50, was instantly killed on Thursday morning. His body passed under the racks and fell 150 feet or to the turbine wheels of a ten thousand horsepower generator. When his body was found it was jammed in the wheel casing, and was terribly mutilated. Keho was keeping the penstock free from ice when he lost his balance and fell into the water, which quickly carried him down. Frank Buchanan saw him fall, but was powerless to save him. The dead man leaves a wife and six children.

TWO MEN BADLY BURNED.

Explosion in a Beer Tank at Fort William.

A despatch from Fort William says: A loud explosion and a burst of flame came from a beer tank at the Kakabeka brewery on Wednesday. Then Joseph Eddy was seen fighting his way out of the narrow manhole. At the top he turned round and managed to extricate his companion, Fred Widnall, who was in a ring of flames. The cause of the explosion will not be known till one of the injured men can make a statement. They were varnishing the interior of the tank at the time, and it is surmised that, contrary to rule, they carried on extension light which ignited the alcohol in the varnish.

HATS OFF, LADIES.

A Live Question is Agitating the City of Winnipeg.

A despatch from Winnipeg says: The removal of their hats by ladies attending church is now a question of real live interest here. The Ministerial Association has taken the matter up with a view to securing the inauguration of it. One of the leading church members has addressed a letter to the association maintaining that if they wish to increase the attendance of the men they must make it possible for them to see the preachers without danger of becoming cross-eyed.

FIFTY PERSONS DROWNED

British Steamer Lima Wrecked on One of the Islands of the Huamblin Passage.

A despatch from Santiago, Chile, says: The Pacific Navigation Company's steamer Lima is ashore on one of the islands of the Huamblin passage of the Straits of Magellan, and will probably be a total loss. The chief pilot and fifty passengers were drowned.

The British steamer Hatumet rescued 205 of the persons aboard the stranded steamer, but was forced to leave 88 aboard, as there was great danger that she, herself, would be swept on the rocks by the storm, that prevailed at the time.

The Chilean Government, immediately on receipt of the news that the Lima had been wrecked, despatched the protected cruiser Minisno Jenteno to the rescue, and the Pacific Navigation Company sent five steamers at top speed to the Straits of Magellan.

The Lima is a British vessel owned in Liverpool, and plying between that port and the ports of South America. She was last reported as sailing from Bahia Blanca, Argentina, on January 26, and was on her way to Chilean and Peruvian ports.

MARKETS CHARGED WITH THEFT.

Warrant Issued for a Montreal Lawyer.

A despatch from Montreal says: A sensation was caused in the Police Court on Thursday morning when a warrant was signed for the arrest of a member of the Montreal Bar on a charge of theft. The complainant, who had been sentenced to jail some time ago, had given the money he had to his lawyer, who was supposed to defend him. When the man was released from jail he went to see his lawyer to get his money back, but the legal man refused, on the ground that he had earned the sum, about $50. The client then swore out a warrant for the lawyer's arrest. Since then the lawyer has returned the money, but he is likely to be suspended.

MURDER AND SUICIDE.

Galician Was Refused Admission to Home in Winnipeg.

A despatch from Winnipeg says: A double tragedy took place about 9 o'clock on Wednesday morning in the north end, when Henry Schwartz, Galician, 46, shot and killed his wife as she opened the door of their former home to him, and then sent a bullet into his own heart. Schwartz returned from a visit to Galicia on Tuesday night, and while there he discovered that his former wife had suicided after he deserted her to come to Canada. Tuesday night his Winnipeg wife, Katrina, aged 38, refused him admittance to their old home, 479 Stella Street, and the shooting followed Wednesday morning.

Besides the $400,000 additional appropriation by Parliament, the plan includes, first, a loan of $1,200,000 to small farmers from the Caisse du Credit Agricole; second, loans to small shopkeepers and tradesmen from the Bank of France and other credit institutions, with certain Government guarantees worked out by Minister of Finance Cochery; and third, loans to small property owners by banks making a specialty of loans on real estate securities.

THE FUTURE OF CANADA

Deputy Minister of Agriculture for Ontario Says It Lies in Her Farms.

A despatch from Toronto says: That the future of the Dominion lies in the productive development of our farming land was the opinion expressed by Mr. C. B. James, Deputy Minister of Agriculture for Ontario, in his address on Wednesday night at the banquet of the Holstein Breeders' Association. He contended that a responsibility lay on all farmers to cultivate and assist one another in cultivating their acres to the highest degree of productiveness by scientific agricultural study and the diffusion of knowledge among their less fortunate neighbors.

Education, the speaker said, was the basis of the development of any people, and best of all was the securing of this education in an independent manner. In Ontario there were two classes of farmers that the province had to deal with; those who kept abreast with new ideas for improvement of orchards and farms and the indifferent class who lagged behind and remained poor.

Ontario, he said, had more than its share of the latter class. To assist these farmers the Department of Agriculture, which, he believed, was one of the best in the world for organization, had started the Agricultural College at Guelph, which after 25 years had shown a marked influence in farming life. To this institution 1,000 men came every year to study, but the speaker claimed they were the men who least needed the education. The province was trying to get after the backward agriculturist. With this in view, the department had started three years ago to locate branches in different parts of the province, where representatives would be stationed to assist farmers in cultivating crops. There would soon be fourteen of these, he said, and the movement had been doing much to better conditions.

The farmer to-day, he said, was having his innings, and the public were at the mercy of the producers. Prices had risen on all products, and there was no chance of their coming down. The reason for this, he said, was that during the last ten years the farming population had suffered a big decrease and the cities were becoming filled up rapidly. Therefore the producers were unable to meet the demands of the consumers.

A despatch from Victoria, B. C., says: It is now said here that Mackenzie & Mann, and not the C. P. Mackenzie & Mann, it is said, are backed in the deal by J. P. Morgan and his associates in New York, and part of the project is to erect immense steel and iron works on Vancouver Island.

One reported condition in connection with the deal is that immediately on its completion the sum of at least $5,500,000 is to be spent in further developing mines and the associated enterprises. The $11,000,000, it is said, is to be paid by May 1st in cash.

PATIENTS FROM ONTARIO

Nine Receiving Treatment at the Pasteur Institute in New York.

A despatch from New York says: During the first six weeks of the present year fifteen patients from the Province of Ontario have received treatment for rabies at the Pasteur Institute here. There are at present eight persons receiving treatment—three from Tilbury, two from Strathroy, two from Atwood, and one from Grimsby. The others have been cured. Twenty-two persons from Ontario received treatment last year, six in 1908, and one in 1906.

Dr. George G. Rambaud, Director of the Institute, says regarding the order that all dogs shall be tied up or muzzled in Western Ontario: "It is the safest, easiest, and cheapest plan to eradicate an outbreak of rabies. A dog bitten by a dog having rabies should be quarantined for at least 5 months, as 99 per cent. will develop rabies in three months, and one per cent. in five or six months."

OTTAWA NEWS.

He Was Tory Candidate.

The gentleman who valued the land and upon whose valuation the Government acted was Mr. F. W. Sumner, Conservative candidate against Hon. Mr. Emmerson at the last election. During the campaign Mr. Sumner repudiated the suggestion that his valuation was excessive, and contended that the price paid was fair and just.

The Mail has made a most unfortunate selection of examples to prove "rake off" in connection with the Intercolonial. Neither of these transactions occurred during the time Hon. Mr. Graham was minister of railways yet the Mail quotes them to support and argument that Mr. Graham is not to be trusted.

Conservatives were to Blame, if Anybody.

In both of the cases selected by the Mail the people chiefly interested were Conservatives, and if too much money was paid it was upon the valuation of prominent Conservatives.

The Mailsays:— "An administration which throws public money to a few supporters in this way may be depended upon to treat all its friends alike." The Mail blunders again; the money in the one case was paid to a Conservative, and in the other upon the valuation of a Conservative.

The Mail goes on to say:—"To suggest that a government guilty of operations such as these ought to be permitted to conduct a tremendous business without supervision and without publicity, is really a bold operation. Minister Graham must have a face of brass or he would never make so daring a proposition."

Tory Substitute for Graham.

The Mail would take the management of the Intercolonial out of the hands of Mr. Graham, a man of the highest character and spotless reputation, and hand it over to Mr. Haggart and a repetition of the Tay canal which was to cost $132,000, but upon which over $350,000 was wasted, for the ditch was never used and produced no revenue—or to Mr. Foster, who distinguished himself in land gambling transactions with the Foresters' funds.

Must Produce Better Examples.

The Mail must produce better arguments. The alleged examples of graft fall to the ground. There was no graft. If anything improper occurred Conservatives are to blame, for they alone were interested in the transactions. These matters were disposed of in the Public Accounts committee and the people heard the evidence of both sides in 1908, and gave a verdict. The people are willing to trust Mr. Graham, and any reforms he desires to bring about should be given a trial. The ravings of the Mail should not be regarded, for that paper is an adept in the art of misrepresentation.

Nothing to Gain.

What is the object of all this attack upon the Laurier administration? The people judged between the parties in 1908, and since that time national affairs have gone from good to better, and the future never looked brighter in a commercial sense than it does to-day. Neither the Mail nor any other paper can advance a reason worthy of any consideration for a change of government.

Government has Done Well.

This Government have deserved well of the people. They have done well and will keep the good work going. The subject of Imperial defence has been intelligently handled, without the hysterical aperturances introduced by the Conservatives in the House. The fiscal policy encourages and fosters trade, which grows larger each month. The revenue shows an increase each month over the same period last year. Railway mileage is on the increase.

House, but one seeks in vain for any act introduced by the leader of the Opposition or the men who constitute themselves subleaders. The men in Parliament on the Conservative side who talk most, do least in the public interest. They waste the time and money of the people in advertising themselves, but perform no useful service for Canada. The Liberal Government is a national blessing, and to change it would be nothing short of a national calamity.

THE PLANET VENUS.

To have the same hemisphere exposed everlastingly to sunlight while the other is in perpetuity turned away must cause a state of things of which we can form but faint conception from what we know on earth. Baked for aeons without letup and still baking, the sunward face must if unshielded be a Tophet surpassing our powers adequately to portray. And unshielded it must be, as we shall presently see. Reversely the other must be a hyperborean expanse to which our polar regions are temperate abodes, for upon one whole hemisphere of Venus the sun never shines, never so much as peeps above the star studded horizon. OTTAWA NEWS.

The frenzied attempts of the Conservative press to shake the confidence of the people in the integrity of the Laurier Government, leads to the circulation of unwarranted statements, not supported by a scintilla of evidence.

Gross Misrepresentation.

The Toronto Mail and Toronto News emulate each other in this regard to a degree that would be ludicrous were it not misleading and vicious. These papers will not hesitate to repeat allegations long ago disproved and circulate untruths long since exposed before the people. They seem disposed to fight over again the campaign of 1908, and educate the people upon the issues then decided. Let us take the Mail and Empire in its issue of August 24 upon its own ground.

The Mail bases its attack, upon a recent interview given by Hon. G. P. Graham, Minister of Railways and Canals, upon his return from Europe after having examined into the methods of conducting railway there. One fact that impressed the Minister of Railways was, that in Germany particulars of tenders are not made public, with the result that the management has an advantage in buying.

Mendacious Insult.

The Mail, referring to this opinion says:

"The experience of the country with Mr. Graham and his predecessors does not favor this appeal for secrecy in the conduct of great public work."

The Mail is challenged to quote a single instance during Mr. Graham's administration in which experience proves anything of the kind. The Mail is unable to point to one item in which the country suffered that party men, or any men might benefit. It is a dastardly attack upon a man of the highest integrity of character and against whom there has never been even the breath of scandal since he entered public life many years ago.

The Mail refers to Mr. Graham's predecessors in office also. As to what Mr. Haggart, Conservative, did when he was minister, the Mail may have information not possessed by the general public, but the people of Ontario at least will protest against a man of operating in the minds of the gentlemen of the Intercolonial Railway who were responsible for this recommendation, other than that they had a desire to do what was in the public interest in locating this round house where it was?

"A. No."

"Q. Have you observed at any time any suspicion of influence any improper or other influence upon Mr. Butler, Mr. Pottinger or yourself in coming to that conclusion?"

"A. Not the slightest."

"Q. Now, naturally you, having to do with the construction part of the road, the buildings and other matters of that kind, you would, I assume, be able to give us some information as to what you think as to the price paid for this land, having regard to its situation, the locality and everything connected with it. Can you tell us whether you regard the amount as being right and just which has been paid by the Government, or as being an excessive payment?"

"A. No. I do not consider it an excessive payment, I know the prices paid for other pieces of land that have been purchased by the Intercolonial Railway for the last thirty years, and I feel quite safe in saying that the price was a very reasonable one."

In the face of evidence of this character, given by members of the party to which the Mail claims allegiance. The example is a very unfortunate one upon which to have the charge that there was a rake off.

Mail's Second Blunder.

The Mail gives another example, the purchase of land at Moncton, also for the Intercolonial Railway. Just a word as to this.

With regard to this transaction which the Mail says was a "rake off." The Government required the land. Officials were instructed to purchase it at a reasonable and right price. A valuation was made by a competent valuator. It was a simple business affair of routine carried out in a straightforward way.

and will keep the good work going. The subject of Imperial defence has been intelligently handled, without the hysterical apertures introduced by the Conservatives in the House. The fiscal policy encourages and fosters trade, which grows larger each month. The revenue shows an increase each month over the same period last year. Railway mileage is on the increase. The West is being settled by a most desirable class of settlers, who are bringing in assets which will increase the wealth of the country by at least $75 000,000 this year, as against $50, 000,000 last year. The integrity of the Canadian constitution has been maintained at the Imperial Conference, legislation has been provided which affords an opportunity of adjusting differences between capital and labor. Postal rates have been reduced, and rural mail delivery provided. Canada's credit in the European markets has been kept high, and the financial necessities of the country have been provided for.

One might write a column enumerating what has been done since 1896. The most important point is that the administration has been honest and economical. When it is remembered that of all the hundreds of millions of dollars expended by the Government since coming into power, the Conservatives only found fault with $1 in every $8,000, not that the money had been dishonestly, but excessively spent, an idea may be formed of the great services Sir Wilfrid Laurier has rendered the people.

No Change Was Ever Made.

No Liberal member has ever been impeached in the House, and no charge involving the loss of a seat has ever been preferred against a member of the Liberal Government. How different it was in Conservative days? Then men were caught red-handed trafficking in the public domain, and improperly using public money. These men were arraigned in the House, and some of them were driven from public life.

Tory Officials Did Wrong.

Nothing of this kind has ever disgraced the Liberal Government. It is true that Judge Cassels found that certain Tories, appointed by a Tory Government, had disgraced their party and been unfaithful to their trust. These men were promptly dismissed from office. The rascalities of a few scoundrels appointed by a former government, and retained in office too long by a Liberal Government, does not reflect upon the honesty of the Government, but rather proves that the quality of mercy was strained.

Simply Because They Are Tories.

The Mail would return to the days previous to 1896, and install in office men who have been pilloried before public opinion. Men who do not possess a single qualification for office are appointed simply because they are Tories and belong to the party supported by the Mail.

Have Nothing to Offer.

The Mail will never succeed in influencing the people to withdraw their confidence from the Liberal Government, because all they have to offer is a set of men who were thrown from office for doing far worse things than the Mail alleges against the Liberals. This important fact being always uppermost, that the Conservatives were proved guilty of the charges brought against them, whereas no charge has ever been seriously made on the floor of the House against any member of the Liberal Government.

Statements made by partizan papers contrary to the facts, do not constitute charges that deserve any serious consideration.

Liberals Do Things.

Every session finds useful legislation introduced from the Liberal side of the one whose hemisphere of Venus the sun never shines, never so much as peeps above the star studded horizon. Night eternal reigns over half of her globe. The thought would appall the most intrepid of our arctic explorers and prevent at least everybody from going to the pole, or, rather, what here replaces it, "through the dark continent." It exemplifies the eventual effects of a force in astronomical mechanics the importance of which is only beginning to be appreciated, tidal friction. It has brought Venus as a world to the deathly pass we have contemplated together. Starting merely as a brake upon her rotation, it has ended by destroying all those physical conditions which enable our own world to be what it is. Night and day, summer and winter, heat and cold, are vital vicissitudes unknown now upon our sister orb. There nothing changes while the centuries pass. An eternity of deadly deathliness is Venus' statuesque lot.—Dr. Percival Lowell in Popular Science.

OLE BULL

Not a Classical Player, but He Bewitched His Hearers.

The truth is that Ole Bull was not a classical player. As I remember him, he could not play in strict tempo. Like Chopin, he indulged in the rubato and abused the portamento. But he knew his public. America, particularly in the regions visited, was not in the mood for sonatas or concertos. "Old Dan Tucker" and the "Arkansas Traveler" were the mode. Bull played them both, played jigs and old tunes, roused the echoes with the "Star Spangled Banner" and Irish melodies. He played such things beautifully, and it would have been musical snobbery to say that you didn't like them. You couldn't help yourself. The grand old fellow bewitched you.

He was a handsome Merlin, with a touch of the charlatan and a touch of the first in his fall, willowy figure, small waist and heavy head of hair. Such white hair! It tumbled in masses about his kindly face like one of his native Norwegian cataracts. He was the most picturesque old man I ever saw except Walt Whitman, at that

POPULAR FALLACIES.

Some Old Fashioned Notions That Still Obtain Credence.

THE CYCLE OF THREE IDEA.

A Drowning Man May Sink Not Only Thrice, but a Dozen Times, and Still Be Rescued—Congestive Chills and the Merging of Diseases—Law Points.

Three physicians were standing in a downtown drug store the other day when one, who had been looking at an evening paper, exclaimed: "Great Caesar, here it is again! I see it in the papers at least twice a month."

"What's that?" asked one of the others.

"It's that popular fallacy about a drowning man sinking for the third time. Here it says, 'Just as he was sinking for the third time he was saved by the timely arrival,' etc. The next time I see this third time business it probably will read, 'He sank for the third time before aid could be had and was drowned.'"

"Why will people get that fool idea that sinking for the third time must needs be fatal to a drowning man? Why, bless you, I saw a man sink a half dozen times before he was rescued alive. An uncle of mine, witnesses said, never sank but once, and he was drowned. The number of times a man sinks has nothing to do with his drowning. He may sink but once, and he may go beneath the water any number of times. It all depends upon the person who is drowning, his physical condition and how quickly the lungs fill with water."

"That cycle of three," suggested another of the doctors, "is carried along by those who insist that a person dies in his third suggestive chill. But this is not true. The same rule holds good in congestive chills as in the case of the drowning man. A person may die in the first of he may have a dozen and still live. The rule of three does not obtain there either."

The first physician, with great disdain, then told how many ignorant persons would swear that "if ye git th' malarial an' it runs into typhoid fever an' it runs into newmomy it's shore death."

"There's that same old rule of three again," he continued almost angrily. "First and foremost, one disease does not run into another. There's no such thing as a collision between diseases, as many believe. If one has malaria he has that and that alone. The same thing is true of typhoid fever and pneumonia. Each one is a separate and distinct trouble, and a doctor with any sense should be able to diagnose his malady from symptoms which are always present in each and entirely different."

From popular fallacies in regard to medicine the conversation drifted to fallacies regarding the law. A lawyer present was called upon to explain first one thing and another, when one of the bystanders said:

"I made a bet the other day that a person had no right to touch a dead body until the coroner arrived, and I won."

"Who decided the question for you?" asked the lawyer smilingly.

"Well," said the man sheepishly, "it was a bartender, but he's an educated fellow and is a good judge of the law."

"You speak of the law as if it were something to be judged like cattle at a fat stock show," replied the attorney.

"There is no law on any statute book in any state in the United States which says one may not touch a body before the arrival of the coroner."

This contractor got results.

He knew how to feed his men.

Some years ago a contractor building a railroad in a warm climate was troubled a great deal by sickness among the laborers.

He turned his attention at once to their food and found that they were getting full rations of meat and were drinking water from a stream near by.

He issued orders to cut down the amount of meat and to increase greatly the quantity of Quaker Oats fed to the men.

He also boiled Quaker Oats and mixed the thin oatmeal water with their drinking water.

Almost instantly all signs of stomach disorders passed and his men showed a decided improvement in strength and spirits.

This contractor had experience that taught him the great value of good oatmeal.

50, nearly $4\frac{1}{2}$ to 1; to be 60, $2\frac{1}{2}$ to 1; to be 70, $4\frac{1}{2}$ chances in 10; to be 80, 1 chance in 5; to be 90, 1 chance in 100.

The average man of 40 has 8% chances to 1 of reaching his fiftieth birthday, 2% chances to 1 of attaining 60, only 5 chances out of 10 of reaching 70, 1 chance in 5% of reaching 80, and 1 chance in 100 of becoming 90.

Having been lucky in all the drawings up to fifty years, the average man has 4% chances to 1 of becoming 60; to become 70 the chances are $1\frac{1}{2}$ to 1 in his favor; to become 80 he has but 1 chance in 5 and to become 90 1 chance in 100.

If already 60 the average citizen has 2 chances to 1 of becoming 70, 1 chance in 4 of becoming 80 and 1 chance in 66 of reaching 90.

The man of 70 has 3 chances in 8 of becoming 80 and 1 in 50 of becoming 90.

If one has weathered the storm until his eightieth birthday he has 1 chance in 17 of reaching his ninetieth milestone.

It will be observed that as we get older our chances of reaching 90 increase greatly.

CHRONIC ULCERS

Mrs. Jas. Elsworth, 902 Selkirk Ave., Winnipeg, says:—"Four years ago ulcers broke out on my left ankle and spread until from the top of my foot to my knee was one extended sore. One ulcer would be almost healed when a second would appear in a new place and in a remarkably short time a deep hole would be eaten into the flesh. The flesh on my leg turned blue and looked shocking indeed. I started using ointment after ointment, but received little or no benefit. The ulcers would heal for a time and then break out afresh. I was laid up in bed for a long time, absolutely unable to walk. My limb was so painful that I had no rest night

A Lesson For Nellie.
Mrs. Washington was a strict disciplinarian about certain matters and among other things always required the members of the household to follow the example of her husband and dress for dinner, which was at 3 o'clock. On one occasion Nellie Custis and her cousin, Martha Dandridge, appeared at the table in their morning gowns, but no comment was made upon it until a coach was seen approaching and the visitors, some French officers of high rank and Charles Carroll, Jr., of Carrollton, one of Miss Custis' ardent suitors, were announced. Instantly the girls, in a flutter of excitement, begged to be excused in order to change their heads, but Mrs. Washington shook her head. "No," she said. "Remain as you are. A costume good enough for President Washington is good enough for any guest of his." Needless to say, Miss Nellie never overlooked her proper garb for dinner again. — National Monthly.

Tantalizing Ownership.
In a French village a citizen had upon his land a part of an old building containing two very beautiful windows. He was in debt and embarrassed and eagerly eloped with the offer of a rich archaeologist, who bought them. Thereupon the government inspector, hearing of the bargain, arrived just in time to stop the masons from dislodging the windows. "You cannot," he said to the villager, "sell antiquities, my man." "But, excellency, I have used the money and paid my creditors." The villager was in despair, but the official was untouched. "That's all right," he said. "The money is safe. The windows are no longer yours. But the buyer can't move a stone of them. He can, however, come with a camp stool and sit down and look at his property as much as he likes."

even, said the man sneepishly. "I was a bartender, but he's an educated fellow and is a good judge of the law." "You speak of the law as if it were something to be judged like cattle at a fat stock show," replied the attorney. "There is no law on any statute book in any state in the United States which says one may not touch a body before the arrival of the coroner." "In case of murder the old English common law used to require that the body of the murdered one be left just as it lay until viewed by one in authority.

"That was done, it can plainly be seen, for the purpose of preserving the surroundings intact so that whatever evidence might be there would not be disturbed. In case of a murder today, especially if any mystery were connected with it, common sense would teach a person to leave everything intact, not alone for the coroner, but for the police officials as well. But should the body of a murdered man be moved there is no law covering it unless it could be proved that the person who moved the body did it with the intention to destroy evidence. In cases of suicide or death by accident there could be no objection to moving the body anywhere in the city if done with humane or some other proper motive." "I'll tell you what is the law," said a stoop shouldered, long armed man who had been listening long enough to get the gist of the discussion. "If a fellow sees a murder through a pane of glass he can't be a witness in the case."

"Oh, piffle!" exclaimed the attorney. "I'm going to lunch. That's the limit. I was waiting for some yap to spring that. If that was the case and a murder should be committed in this room half a dozen of us could not be competent witnesses. If your statement is true, because we are wearing glasses. Glass is glass whether in a window or on the nose. There is no such law as that. That's foolish." "I heard my grandfather say that," insisted the long armed man, "and he know'd law too." "Yes," retorted the exasperated attorney, "and he no doubt gave it out as law that a man could stand with his back against his own house and kill any one who came within a certain distance of him. But he would hang for it unless he had mighty good defense. All of those things are what we call 'chimney corner law' but they won't hold in court."—Kansas City Journal.

CHANCES OF LIFE.
Probability at Your Age of How Long You Will Live.
After we are dead it probably will not concern us whether we died at twenty or fifty or ninety, but just now most of us are intensely interested in the matter, and, being average persons in sound health, we can figure out with certainty just what our chances are of reaching any particular age, says Harper's Weekly.

If we are just 20 years of age, our chances of living to or beyond 30 are nearly 12 to 1; of living to be 40, 5% to 1; to be 50, 3 to 1; to be 60, 1.23 to 1. Of living to be 70 we have less than 1 chance in 25; to be 80, less than 1 chance in 57; and to be 90, less than 1 chance in 100.

If we have reached 30, our chances to reach 40 are nearly 11 to 1; to be

Make Each Animal Worth 25% Over Its Cost
On 2/3 of a Cent a Day
Nobody ever heard of "stock food" curing the bots or colic, making hens lay in winter, increasing the yield of milk five pounds per cow a day, or restoring run-down animals to plumpness and vigor.
When you feed "stock food" to your cow, horse, swine or poultry, you are merely feeding them what you are growing on your own farm. Your animals do not need more food, but something to help their bodies get all the good out of the feed you give them so they can get fat and stay fat all year round; also to prevent disease, cure disease and keep them up to the best possible condition. No "stock food" can do all these things. ROYAL PURPLE STOCK SPECIFIC can and does. It is Not a "Stock Food" But a "Conditioner"

ROYAL PURPLE STOCK SPECIFIC contains no grain, nor farm products. It increases yield of milk from three to five pounds per cow per day before the Specific has been used two weeks. It makes the milk richer and adds flesh faster than any other preparation known. Young calves fed with ROYAL PURPLE are as large at six weeks old as they would be when fed with ordinary materials at twelve weeks.
ROYAL PURPLE STOCK SPECIFIC builds up run-down animals and restores them to plumpness almost magically. Cures bots, colic, worms, skin diseases and debility permanently. Dan McEwan, the horseman, says: "I have used ROYAL PURPLE STOCK SPECIFIC persistently in the feeding of 'The Eel,' 2024, largest winner of any pacer on Grand Circuit in 1908, and 'Henry Winters,' 4085, brother of 'Allen Winters,' winner of $30,000 in trotting stakes Specific almost a year ago, and I will always have it in my stables."

Royal Purple
STOCK AND POULTRY SPECIFICS
One 50c. package of ROYAL PURPLE STOCK SPECIFIC will last one animal seventy days, which is a little over two-thirds of a cent a day. Most stock foods in fifty cents last but fifty days and are given three times a day. ROYAL PURPLE STOCK SPECIFIC is given but once a day, and lasts half again as long. A $1.50 pail containing four times the amount of the fifty cent package will last 280 days. ROYAL PURPLE will increase the value of your stock 25%. It is an astonishingly quick fattener, stimulating the appetite and the relish for food, assisting nature to digest and turn feed into flesh. As a hog fattener it is a leader. It will save many times its cost in veterinary bills. ROYAL PURPLE POULTRY SPECIFIC is our other Specific for poultry, not for stock. One 50 cent package will last twenty-five hens 70 days, or a pail costing $1.50 will last twenty-five hens 280 days, which is four times more material for only three times the cost. It makes a "laying machine" out of your hens summer and winter, prevents fowls losing flesh at moulting time, and cures poultry diseases, guaranteed.
Just use ROYAL PURPLE on one of your animals and any other preparation on another animal in the same condition; after comparing results you will say ROYAL PURPLE has your merchant or write us for our valuable 32-page booklet on cattle and poultry diseases, containing also cooking recipes and full particulars about ROYAL PURPLE STOCK AND POULTRY SPECIFICS.

If you cannot get Royal Purple Specifics from merchants or agents, we will supply you direct, express prepaid, on receipt of $1.50 a pail for either Poultry or Stock Specifics.

Fifteen Years of Agony

"Fruit-a-tives" Promptly Cured Him After Doctors Had Failed To Give Relief.

CHARLES BARRETT, Esq.

Harbor au Bouche,

Antigonish Co., N.S., March 24, 1909.
"I wish to express my sincere appreciation of the great benefit I received from taking 'Fruit-a-tives.' I suffered from Biliousness and Dyspepsia for fifteen years and I consulted physicians and took many kinds of ordinary medicine, but got no relief. I was in miserable health all the time and nothing did me any good. I read the testimonial of Archibald McKechnie, of Ottawa, and I decided to try 'Fruit-a-tives.' I have taken a number of boxes of 'Fruit-a-tives,' but before I had taken one box I felt better and now am entirely well.
"I am thankful to be well after fifteen years suffering, and I am willing to have this statement published for the sake of other sufferers, and to them I strongly recommend 'Fruit-a-tives.'"

THE SILK SPECIAL.

Fast Train That Carries the Raw Material Across the Continent.

When a fast mail steamer from Yokohama, Shanghai or Canton, the great silk ports of the orient, docks at Vancouver, Tacoma, Seattle or San Francisco a special train stands ready on the pier awaiting her arrival. It is not the private conveyance of some transportation king or multimillionaire or of any of the passengers who throng the decks, nor does it tarry for the sacks of letters from the far east. Its coaches do not shine with the refuence of varnish and plate glass. Their paint is dull, and they are windowless, like express cars. The side doors toward the ship are open. This special is the emperor of trains. It is reserved for the costliest of all freight—raw silk. When it starts eastward its lading will be worth a fortune—a million and a half, perhaps two millions, of dollars.

A giant locomotive, built for speed, with driving wheels greater in diameter than the height of a tall man, backs down and is coupled on to the cars, now sealed and locked and ready. With clanging bell and hissing steam the train glides out and, with a burst of speed that seems almost exultant, takes the main line rails for the long journey. The silk must be landed in New York in five days. Even the United States mails will not travel faster across the continent. Day and night the silk train rushes eastward over mountains and plains, across deserts and through great cities. It never stops except to change engines. Then

In Deer Fork Canyon

How a Man Helped to Save His Enemy's Life.

By ADDISON HOWARD GIBSON.

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

In the maroon haze which always in the late summer enwraps the rugged slopes of Deer Fork canyon Faith Austin was gathering wild red raspberries. A young man in miner's garb who was prospecting behind the boulders on the opposite slope saw her and had just made up his mind to cross the stream that zigzagged down the canyon and join her when he saw a man swinging along up the trail toward her.

"It's Nick," he said to himself. "I had forgotten for the moment what he told me last night. I meant then to leave the canyon at once, and I must, for I can't bear to stay and see her throw herself away on such a fellow as Nick Sanders." And Howard Olney turned and walked away that he might not witness the meeting between the two.

The girl did not need to turn her head to know who was coming. There was an unmistakable individuality in the shuffling steps, and recognition brought a look of annoyance to her face as she continued her work.

"Pickin' berries, be you, Faith? You're lookin' sweet as a Injun pink. What's the use of your workin' so hard for them boarders when you know I'm ready for you?" he asked.

"But you ought to know by this time that I'm not ready for you," she flashed back.

The man reddened to the roots of his sandy hair, but, controlling his anger, replied:

"I've got enough to keep you from slavin' here, boardin' miners, as you're doin'. There's no use in your stayin' single for Howard Olney. He left for good this mornin'. He's goin' to keep books for Mr. Owen, the superintendent of the High Tone mine."

The telltale color mounted to Faith's cheeks, but she bent forward to capture a refractory vine, thus hiding her face from her companion.

"You think I'm not good enough for you," he went on, as she took no notice of his insinuation. "You think Olney's better'n me 'cause he's been a schoolmaster back east and can use lots of grammar. But if you'd lived in the same shack with him, as I've done, you'd know he's not such a saintly galoot as you think he is. It's no man that'll turn his back on the girl as loves him and go off courtin' Superintendent Owen's daughter," he finished contemptuously.

Faith faced him with flashing eyes. "Nick Sanders, you're worse than I thought you were! Howard Olney took you into his cabin and nursed you through a spell of fever when nobody else would, and now you try to injure him behind his back. That's your gratitude!"

His eyes fell beneath the withering scorn of hers. Of the allusion to herself she took no notice, but she could not help resenting the slur put upon the man she loved.

"You've no call to fire up for Olney," he said maliciously. "He's above courtin' in a girl who makes her livin' cookin'

Clean Within!

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills
Purify the Blood and Prolong Life

Vigorous health at 70 due to Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

If as much intelligent care were given to keeping the body clean and pure within as well as without we would see more healthy, vigorous old men and women. The daily bath does its part by keeping the pores of the skin open so that they throw off much of the body's impurities, but it is even more important that the bowels and kidneys should be kept regular and active.

If the bowels fail, as they often do late in life, to move regularly at least once a day, the waste matter from the food accumulates, decays, poisons the system and upsets the stomach.

If the kidneys are sluggish the impurities which they should filter from the blood remain and cause rheumatism.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills regulate the bowels, stimulate the kidneys and open up the pores of the skin. The result is a body clean within—pure, red blood—good digestion—and a hale and hearty old age.

Three generations have proved the value of Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, and their sale is steadily increasing all over the world.

her knees, peered down into the dark depths below. The black sullen waters of the rising stream boiled and hissed among the jagged rocks and crevices, lashing madly the legs of a man who stood insecurely on a narrow ledge fully halfway down. He was clinging in terror to a jutting rock above him, which threatened every moment to give way. It was a perilous, an awful situation, and the girl shuddered as she gazed, while in the white horror drawn face upturned to hers she recognized Nick Sanders.

"For God's sake, Faith, try to help me out of this!" he screamed.

"I'll try, Nick!" she called back. But how was she to do it? She looked about hopelessly; then her eyes fell upon a large coil of castoff rope near the broken windlass. She caught it up eagerly, and, lowering one end to Nick, she said:

"Tie this around you under the arms."

He did so and felt himself being slowly drawn upward. Such was his peril that he could not realize that the girl's hands alone were not strong enough to pull him to the top. He did not know that another had also heard his calls for help and had arrived just in time to aid in the rescue. When almost up a blow on the head from a shelving ledge rendered him unconscious for several minutes.

When he came to himself he was lying on the bank of Deer Fork, and Faith was bathing his face. Hearing Howard Olney's voice, he kept his eyes closed and listened.

"I'm glad I was in time to help you save him," the young man was saying. "I was on my way to see you, Faith, to say goodbye before leaving the canyon. At first I thought I would go away without, but I couldn't. I felt that I must look upon your face once more before I gave you up to him."

Nick heard the tremor in Olney's voice that told of the emotion he was

"Mme. Chapellier?"

"Yes."

"His excellency has directed me to admit you as soon as you called."

The attendant led the way to the private office of the minister of foreign affairs, opened the door and announced: "Mme. Chapellier!"

"The government," said the minister, "appreciating your past services, is desirous of adding to the amounts already paid you another 50,000 francs."

"And I doubt not the government expects me to add to my past services a corresponding amount."

"Can you leave for London tonight?"

"I can go anywhere at any time."

"Very well. I will explain."

The minister cast a look about the room, habitual with him before entering upon a matter involving secrecy, leaned forward in his chair and spoke in a low tone.

"The British government has made a treaty with the ambassador of the sublime porte at London by which the sultan grants valuable concessions to Great Britain. We have been negotiating with the sultan's ambassador here in Paris for these same privileges, but we are too late.

"Sir Bradford Chichester, one of the younger members of the British diplomatic corps, has engaged passage by sea for Constantinople in a ship sailing on the 14th. He will carry with him the British-Turkish treaty for signature at the Turkish foreign office. It is our purpose to delay him either at starting or on the way."

Mme. Chapellier reached London the next morning and reported in person to Baron la Brun, the French minister.

"In order to assist you," he said, "I give a dinner this evening at which Sir Bradford Chichester will be present. Have you costumes?"

"Everything except appropriate jewels. I shall personate a wealthy American widow—Mrs. Worthington Wood."

"Where shall I send them?"

"No—Portman square."

"Very well. I shall expect you at 8."

At the dinner given at the French embassy Mrs. Worthington Wood, who, though born of French parents, had lived the first fifteen years of her life in America, was taken in to dinner by Sir Bradford Chichester. She knew that his family, though ancient, were not rich and that he would gladly take a wealthy wife. She manifested so much interest in seeing his country seat, the Dunes, on the Irish channel and some 200 miles from London, that he, thinking to benefit in the matter of a courtship—should he deem such desirable—arranged a house party to go there to remain till the 13th, when he must return to the city to be ready to sail on the 14th. Of course Mrs. Wood was invited.

The next day a small number of guests assembled at the Dunes. It was winter, but the house was cheerfully lighted and logs blazed on every hearth. Sir Bradford devoted himself to the young widow. There are wom-

Day and night the silk train rushes eastward over mountains and plains, across deserts and through great cities. It never stops except to change engines. Then it halts only for a moment. Another giant locomotive, oiled and groomed and fit, is always waiting to take up the race.

The silk train is run as a special. If a limited loses time and gets in the way the limited has to fret on a siding while the silk train roars by in a whirlwind of dust. The silk special runs on no schedule except that of the greatest speed consistent with safety. The chief dispatcher of each division listens watchfully to the news of its progress, coming in over the wires from one signal tower and station after another. While the silk train is yet a thousand miles away it is being prepared for. The capabilities of engineers and engines are thoughtfully discussed by division dispatchers and trainmasters, and the men and machines with the highest capacity for speed are picked. Tracks are cleared and a thousand details arranged so that there shall be no delay in hurling this huge projectile across the continent.—Harper's Weekly.

His eyes fell beneath the withering scorn of hers. Of the allusion to herself she took no notice, but she could not help resenting the slur put upon the man she loved.

"You've no call to fire up for Olney," he said maliciously. "He's above court in a girl who makes her livin' cookin' for miners. Besides, he's in love with Daisy Owen, and she's struck on Olney's good looks. It's bound to be a match."

Faith again bent over her berry picking that her tormentor might not see the effect of his words. She had heard through her mother's boarders about Miss Owen's wealth, beauty and accomplishments and realized that she was a mere nobody compared with the superintendent's heiress. What right had she to hope that Mr. Olney would ever love her? Still, the mocking tones stung her keenly, and, her basket being filled, she said goodby and hurried away up the rocky trail that led to a dingy, weather worn cabin half hid by the boulders and evergreens surrounding it.

Faith and her mother were alone in the world. About a year before her father had been killed by an explosion in the mines. It was Howard Olney, a young schoolmaster from New York, turned prospector, who had risked his own life to recover the body. They could never forget this nor his untiring kindness during that time of bereavement. It was he who had encouraged them to go on with the regular routine of life, and from this sad period Faith dated her love for the young man. He had a shack two miles down Deer Fork, and most of his days were spent prospecting.

Soon after Sanders suddenly returned, having been away several months. He had been "speculating," he announced, and had brought back some money. Nick had known the family in Indiana. In fact, he had accompanied Mr. Austin to Colorado. He was a crafty, shiftless fellow and did not make friends among the miners. Indeed, so unpopular was he that when stricken with fever shortly after there was no one to care for him except Mrs. Austin, until Howard, to relieve the overburdened woman, took the fellow home with him and nursed him back to health and strength. Had it not been for jealousy he would have been grateful as one of his selfish nature could be.

Meanwhile Faith had wandered down the canyon, unconsciously taking the trail over which her lover had passed an hour or two before.

"I will give up thinking of him," she said, stooping to gather a spray of wild columbine. "I won't let his going away without even saying goodby worry me. Mother must not see that I care, for of course she'll hear that he's gone. I'll pick some flowers as an excuse for coming and go home and live my life without him. A woman's heart must be strong for endurance."

Suddenly a wild cry burst upon her ears.

"Help, help!"

The girl listened with bated breath. It did not come from the direction of the mining camp. Still, it might be one of the men had wandered down the gulch and met with some accident.

Again the call came, wild and agonizing, as though face to face with a terrible doom. This time she located the cry.

"Some one has fallen into the old shaft!" she cried, running swiftly in that direction. This "old shaft" led to what had once been a promising mine, but a subterranean stream that rose mysteriously and at no regular period rendered it so unsafe that it had been abandoned, and no one who knew of its treachery dared venture into the shaft.

Almost breathless, Faith gained the mouth of the mine and, dropping on save him." The young man was saying "I was on my way to see you, Faith, to say goodby before leaving the canyon. At first I thought I would go away without, but I couldn't. I felt that I must look upon your face once more before I gave you up to him."

Nick heard the tremor in Olney's voice that told of the emotion he was endeavoring to control.

"Just once more, Faith," he went on. "I should not go if you could love me, but I know how it is. You have known Nick all your life. In the delirium of his fever I learned how much he loved you, and afterward he told me that you loved him in return. I will not come between you. Goodby, dear one. Remember I helped save him for your sake."

There was intense pain in the tones, and as he turned away Faith gave a quick sob, and Nick felt a hot tear fall on his face. But the girl made no effort to detain the man she loved. One word would have called him back to her side, yet her lips seemed paralyzed. She knew that he loved her and was going because he believed she loved another; that she would never see him again and her old lonely life would go on unbroken, unbrightened by him. He was slipping away from her forever, still she could not utter a word.

And Nick knew, too, that if Olney went now his own chances of some time winning Faith were better than ever.

"Hold on a minute, Howard," called the rescued man, sitting up.

"What is it, Nick?" asked Olney, turning back, though he did not trust himself to look toward Faith.

"Come up nearer. I've got something to tell you both, and you don't know how hard it is for a man to call himself out loud and right before two good folks he's been a-wrongin', a onery big liar," said Nick. "But that's just what I am—a onery big liar. I lied to you about Faith's lovin' me, and then I lied to her about your leavin' Deer Fork to keep accounts for Mr. Owen just because you were in love with his daughter. I'm a low lived devil, but when I was down in that ole shaft a-facin' death I made up my mind if I ever got the chance I'd be a better man. Now that you two have saved my worthless life and have given me the chance I asked for I'm goin' to begin with you and Faith by settin' you right. You love each other, and I want to see you happy, so my lies ain't standin' in your trail any more."

"Maybe you wonder how I happened to be down in that old mine. You remember that Swede who got a pile of gold and some nuggets stole from his cabin over on Firecheck creek? Well, I am the thief, and I hid it all down in that shaft, where I knowed nobody would dare go pokin' round. I went down, aimin' to git part of it to swap off, and that water riz right up like a avengin' angel. I hain't got the makin' of half a saint in me, but I'm goin' to tote back that stuff where I got it from and strike a new trail up the canyon of life."

Lost Opportunity.

"And you didn't hear of it?" inquired Mrs. Gabbie.

"Not one word."

"Why, I've known it for a week, so I supposed everybody heard of it."

to sail on the 14th. Of course Mrs. Wood was invited.

The next day a small number of guests assembled at the Dunes. It was winter, but the house was cheerfully lighted and logs blazed on every hearth. Sir Bradford devoted himself to the young widow. There are women who possess the knack of carrying an impressible man quickly off his feet. Such was Mrs. Worthington Wood. She administered, so to speak, a love potion. There was in it a reason—to cause her victim to feel that he could never aspire to possess her. Eyes that shot a spark to kindle passion, feigned innocence to excite reverence.

Sir Bradford, Mrs. Wood and several others of the house party had gone up from London on the same train and in the same compartment. Mrs. Wood noticed that her host carried a leather hand bag that he never lost sight of. If he left the train for a moment at a station he took the bag with him; if he went into the smoking compartment to enjoy a cigar the hand bag went with him.

Mrs. Wood also noticed that when he entered the family equipage to be driven to his home, while he gave up his rugs, umbrella and other such belongings to the servants, he held on to the satchel. She deemed it necessary to her plans to know where the hand bag would be deposited. But as soon as the host entered the house, leaving his guests to be shown to their rooms by the housekeeper, he disappeared. When Mrs. Wood next saw him the satchel was not with him.

RICHMOND MINUTES.

February 7th, 1910.

"I have brought with me," she said to him, "a few of my finest jewels, not daring to leave them in London. Have you a safe in the house?"

"Certainly," he said. "One moment. I will call the housekeeper. The safe is in my bedroom. She will go with us."

"Us? Is it necessary for you to go?"

"I never allow my safe to be opened except by myself."

"On second thought, I will keep my valuables locked in my trunk."

There was a faint reproach in the glance she gave him and her tone.

"Iardon me," he said. "I would trust you, but my housekeeper—"

"You would not trust?"

"Certainly, I would trust you both, but there is property in that safe that doesn't belong to me. Would I be justified in permitting any one, however trustworthy, to go in there?"

His tone was growing more decided. Interests of state were asserting themselves.

"You would be a fool to do so. Here is my box. I intrust it to your care."

A temptation came to him not to be outdone in a matter of confidence, but he resisted it. Taking the box, in which there were only a few gems for informal occasions, he went away and placed it in his safe.

The next evening at dinner the young widow was entrancing. She seemed to be in a light, happy mood. She told the story of how the host had refused to permit her to visit his safe without his being present and set all the guests laughing by its humorous telling. The host laughed with the rest, and had he not been coming under a spell that would have ended the matter. As it was he winced. There was underneath Mrs. Wood's humor a faint suspicion of ridicule. He tried to excuse himself, but only got tangled in his own excuses.

"Don't you think," said the lady to the others, "that Sir Bradford owes me some reparation?"

All banteringly agreed that he did.

"Well, this is the last night of our visit here. Let him intrust me with the key of his safe till tomorrow morning."

All declared that such an act would not necessarily be showing any confidence whatever. But the widow insisted that it would satisfy her, and she smilingly held out her hand for the key.

The thought flashed through Sir Bradford's head that the safe, being in his own room, would be under his control through the night. There was a pretty woman smiling at him, daring him—a woman with whom he was fascinated and whom he thought it advantageous to marry. Nevertheless he did not consent. Then suddenly there came a dash from the woman's eyes, a haughty look as if she deemed such a denial of confidence insulting. Sir Bradford put his hand in his pocket and tossed the key on the table before her.

Amid a burst of laughter she seized it and placed it in her corsage.

The diplomat had no sooner yielded to an impulse than he regretted his act. A man under a woman's spell is liable to rush from one extreme to another. One moment he trusts her implicitly; the next he fears that he has fallen into the toils of a devil. At any rate, such was the fear of Sir Bradford. Never for a moment during the evening did he leave the side of the woman who possessed the key of his safe—the safe where was deposited that which if it passed into the possession of another would ruin him. If he turned away from her for a moment it was that she should not see the expression on his face when he cursed himself for a fool.

The widow rallied him continually. "Aren't you going to give me one mo-

BATH.

(For last week.)

Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Bradley, of Leitrit, spent Sunday with her brother Mr. H. C. Morris of the Northern Crown Bank here on their way to Manitou Man.

The Dutch Tea and apron sale held in the Town Hall on Monday evening by the Ladies of St. Johns Church was a great success, the sum of $46.35 being realized. The spelling match a connection with it, was especially interesting.

Miss Wilson of Odessa is spending a few days with Mrs. Maxwell Robinson. Quite a number of our citizens took in the play at Napanee on Friday evening last.

We are glad to state that at last reports Mr. Oswald Snider, injured on the railway near here, is improving nicely.

Mr. Wilcox arrived a few days ago from Saskatchewan and is visiting at D. T. Rowse's.

FOLLOWING THE BAND.

Pageantry Appeals to the Negro' Tropical Imagination.

Once upon a time a Philadelphia lawyer came south. He had a pair of big spectacles, an inquisitive mind and he wanted to know, says Harrj Dickson in Success Magazine. With his southern friend he was hurrying to the courthouse. A negro parade blocked the street—negroes in carriages, on horseback, on foot; negroes with swords and axes, stumpy negroes with Masonic banners, lean negroes with Pythian devices, fat negroes with Odd Fellows' insignia, miscellaneous negroes with miscellaneous emblems.

The Philadelphian pushed through the crowd and ran back in great excitement. "What's it all about? What are they doing?"

The southerner couldn't explain, but beckoned to a very intelligent young negro—who, by the way, was a prominent politician—and asked, "Tom, what's the occasion for all this parade?"

The young negro laughed. "Now, jedge, you ought to know dat a nigger don't need no 'cession for a parade."

Tom had spoken a mouthful. Pageantry appeals to the negro's tropical

STATEMENT BY MR DYER.

My attention has been called to a recent article in a New York daily newspaper which has been widely copied, and wherein it stated that the future of the phonograph was not very bright. This article is entirely misleading and does not accord in any way with the views of myself or anyone connected with the Edison Companies. The future of the phonograph was never so bright as at the present time; in fact I feel that the surface has hardly been scratched. Orders are coming in so rapidly at the present time that we are not able to fill them promptly and the sales are entirely satisfactory. The fact that we are just starting in with the Amberola and a full line of Grand Opera Records is certainly an indication that so far as we are concerned the future does not have to be questioned. If any of us had the slightest doubt as to the future of the business, why should we be spending hundreds of thousands of dollars each year in advertising and a corresponding amount in the development of new lines and in experimental work?

In connection with the very article under consideration, it is interesting to inquire why, if Mr. Edison has any doubt as to the future of the business, he should be willing to spend $155,000.00 in cash to acquire a minority stock interest? The whole transaction was simply this, that in the early days of the phonograph business this particular minority block of stock of the Edison Phonograph Works was acquired by outside interest, and was later put up as collateral to secure the issue of bonds of another independent company (not controlled by Mr. Edison) having rights in certain foreign countries, and on which the interest payments were defaulted. These bondholders were anxious to realize something from their investment and Mr. Edison was willing to buy the stock, so that the transaction was consummated.

The Edison Phonograph Works, as persons familiar with the business know, is a separate company located at Orange and engaged only in the manufacture of machines, which are turned over to and are distributed by the National Phonograph Company. The National Company manufactures all Edison records and sells directly to

No Chance In History.

Mazzini said that he did not believe that chance existed in history. "A cause must necessarily underlie every event, although for the moment it may appear as the result of apparently accidental circumstances. An Alexander, a Caesar, a Napoleon, are not the results of accident, but the inevitable product of the time and nation from which they spring. It was not Caesar who destroyed the Roman republic. The republic was dead before Caesar came. Sulla, Marius, Catiline, preceded and foreshadowed Caesar, but he, gifted with keener insight and greater genius, snatched the power from them and concentrated it in his own hands. For there was no doubt that he was fitter to rule than all the others put together. At the same time, supposing he had appeared 150 years earlier, he would not have succeeded in destroying the republic. When he came the life had already gone out of it, and even Caesar's death could not restore that."

Nicely Graded.

It is still a tradition that the people of Manchester, England, should gibe at Liverpool with the proverb, "A Manchester man, a Liverpool gentleman," but, it is said, classification is ...the same where was deposited that which if it passed into the possession of another would ruin him. If he turned away from her for a moment it was that she should not see the expression on his face when he cursed himself for a fool.

The widow rallied him continually "Aren't you going to give me one moment alone?" "Be comforted! I am not in the habit of visiting any but my own room when I visit." "Will you sleep with a revolver under your pillow tonight?" These were some of the banterings she gave him, much to the amusement of the guests. At mid night, when the party broke up, she had made no move. She rose with the others and went up to her room.

The moment Sir Bradford heard her door close he went up to his own apartment. With his eyes fixed on his safe he gave himself up to tumultuous musing. It contained his possible ruin and the key was in the possession of a woman he had known but a few days.

"Pooh, pooh! What an ass! She only did it to bedevil me. Nonsense! I have a revolver under my pillow and if any one should come in here tonight—More nonsense! Who's to come?" Thus he tried to dismiss the matter from his mind. But, oh, if he only had the key!

He went to bed and tried to sleep. Slumber would not come. Fancying he heard a movement in his room, he arose and struck a light. He was ashamed of himself for doing so, but left it burning. This made him feel a trifle more comfortable, and toward morning he went to sleep.

He was awakened by his valet bringing hot water. After a glance at the safe, which showed no evidence of having been tampered with, he arose, dressed and went down to breakfast. A maid approached him and said:

"I took the hot water to Mrs. Wood, room 6. She didn't answer when I knocked, and I went in. She isn't there."

Sir Bradford blanched. Like lightning the thought flashed through his brain that the key of his safe had gone with her. Then he saw that he was ruined. He was to sail that afternoon for Constantinople. The only way to get the treaty was to break into his safe. But it was a new and perfect one, put in since he had entered the diplomatic service. Only in London could men be found of sufficient skill to do the work, and London was 200 miles away. He put his hand to his head, staggered up to his room and locked himself in.

Twenty-four hours later the minister of foreign affairs in Paris received the card of Mme. Chappeller. He directed that she be at once admitted.

"Well?" he said.

"I left the diplomat at his home far from London with the treaty locked in his safe. There is the key."

"And how much time do you think we will gain?"

She handed him an item cut from a newspaper stating that Sir Bradford Chichester had sent to London for men to open his safe; that they had failed and others more skillful had gone up. He had offered the latter £1,000 if they would do the job in three hours.

"That will do," said the minister. "Our treaty is on the way."

He drew her a check for 50,000 francs.

The young negro laughed. "Now, judge, you ought to know dat a nigger don't need no 'casion for a parade."

Tom had spoken a mouthful. Paganry appeals to the negro's tropical imagination. Churches and lodges furnish most of the social life that he knows. He does not ask why the brass band is playing. He keeps step with the fellow that beats the drum and is happy.

DANCING ROLAND.

A Scotch Shepherd's Remedy For All Kinds of Maladies.

A highland shepherd, one Donald McAlpin, a famous dancer, was reputed to have cured his mistress of a mysterious malady by means of dancing a reel with her, and this story being nosed abroad gained him the reputation of being a successful physician. His humble cottage in Slockmuick, overlooking Strathspey, was besieged with crowds of patients who hoped to get rid of their ailments by a dance with Donald. The shepherd did not hesitate to take advantage of this stroke of good luck and soon had a large and thriving practice.

The treatment adopted was very simple, the main features being as follows: In cases of indigestion moderate doses of medicated "aqua" were taken, followed by the ceum shull, or promenade step. For catarrh Donald prescribed in order to produce perspiration a large dose of gruel mixed with honey and butter, followed by ceum crask, or highland fling. All the different processes terminated in the patient being well wrapped up in warm blankets, and the doses of medicine and dancing were repeated, according to the patient's constitution and the nature of his disease.—British Medical Journal.

The Telephone and Julius Caesar.

Julius Caesar missed a great deal in not knowing the telephone or at least in not using it if he knew it. One can see the telephone engineer attached to the Roman postoffice endeavoring, but without avail, to get an instrument installed at the capitol and at the palace. "I am instructed by the emperor to say that he does not despise these barbarian novelties, and so Thomas Alva Edison need not call again with his magician's apparatus." A signal blunder! We can imagine what have happened. "Hello, 2187 Tiber! Is it thou, Artemidorus? I understand thou rangst me up this morning. What? Details of a plot? Go not to the senate today? Beware of Brutus? Go not near Casca? Right, and I thank thee, Artemidorus. I will have an extra guard put on instantly and the conspirators arrested." And so, though Artemidorus was unable to give his warning in the street, he gave it over the telephone, and Caesar's valuable life and with it the fortune of Rome were saved.—St. James' Gazette.

A Gloomy African Pool.

There is a large, deep and mysterious pool in the valley of the upper Kafue river, northwestern Rhodesia. This wonderful pool lies in flat country, and one comes to it quite suddenly, its banks being concealed by dense forest. There is a small native village near the pool, and the inhabitants have a superstitious dread of it. They refuse to drink the water or use it for any purpose whatever. To sit beside this still, pellucid pool of unknown depth, surrounded by precipitous walls in the heart of the tropical forest, would induce a feeling of awe in the breast of even the most civilized man.

persons familiar with the business know, is a separate company located at Orange and engaged only in the manufacture of machines, which are turned over to and are distributed by the National Phonograph Company. The National Company manufactures all Edison records and sells directly to the trade. The National Company in assets, property and amount of business done is immeasurably larger than Edison Phonograph Works.

The purchase of this block of stock by Mr. Edison was a personal matter and has no direct bearing on the future of the phonograph business, other than showing his confidence and a desire to withdraw the stock from litigation.

Sham Wisdom.

The Sophists were a body of teachers in ancient Athens during the fourth and fifth centuries B. C., who gave instruction in any or all the higher branches of learning. Although they were not a philosophic sect and held no doctrines in common, the Sophists were nevertheless skeptics and maintained a belief of uncertainty of all particular knowledge and, in fact, in the impossibility of all truth. Their two leading representatives were Protagoras and Gorgias. The Sophists were charged with bringing reasoning into contempt by casting uncertainty over the most obvious truths and in consequence were ridiculed and denounced by Aristophanes, Socrates and Plato. Aristotle defined a Sophist as "a man who makes money by sham wisdom."

Nicely Graded.

It is still a tradition that the people of Manchester, England, should gibe at Liverpool with the proverb, "A Manchester man, a Liverpool gentleman," but, it is said, classification is not so strongly marked in Lancashire as in the old days. When stagecoaches were running a guard was once asked, "Who has that gotten inside, Billy?" Billy consulted his list and replied, "A gentleman fra Liverpool, a man fra Manchester, a chap fra Owdham and a fellow fra Wigan."

Sport and Athletics in America.

Sport and athletics in America are vastly different terms. Sport should be play, not work. Athletics as practiced in general are too strenuous, too spectacular and too exclusive. We are not an athletic nation. Far from it. We talk athletics, but there is too much grand stand and too little actual participation in games.—Malcolm Kenneth Gordon in Century.

BLESSINGS OF IMPERFECTION

Perfection Might Mean Peace, But It Would Be the Peace of Death

"We are saved by hope."—Romans viii. 24.

To every man life is either an infliction or an inspiration. It all depends on how you take it, as a dose or as a spur. It is easy to become so conscious of calamities possible, troubles impending, and difficulties present as to be oppressed with a sense of the universe as warring against you, or you can see it all as a glorious struggle in which it is a joy to have a part.

Life is not all a joyous way of pleasure. No person of sensibilities can ignore altogether its pain and need, or ever be free from the sense of personal incompleteness and of unrealized adjustment to the universe. But this incompleteness, restlessness, and dissatisfaction may be the cause of our profoundest joy and largest hope.

A man is greater than an angel, though he may not be better, and may be worse. In an important sense imperfection is better and greater than perfection. That which is perfect has found its limits, has reached its fullness. Man sees no limit about him, and goes on forever without the sense of completion. That is the mark of living, that the more you live the larger life stretches before you.

But for our imperfections there would be no growth; the future would be like a blank without the hope of larger things. This it is that makes no matter what freight of woe they may bring to us—that they stretch before, they promise onward steps, new vistas, the chance to be more, feel more, know more.

If ever we are inclined to complain of the shocks of fortune, the buffets and snarls of living, we ought to turn and look on them all with gratitude. They shake us out of dull content; they testify to our incompleteness and call on us to learn life's lessons, to gain new strength to withstand their oncoming attacks. The fact that we are vulnerable makes us ultimately victorious.

Now, it matters not how religious a man may profess to be, how freely he may handle pious phraseology, if he spends his breath in complainings about the sorrows of this existence and in sighing after another world where he will be free from the present penalties and pains and will enter into the life of perfection, the life that has attained and knows no further desire, his religion is a menace to this world and to him as a dweller here.

Our present business is with the life that is full of prophecy of larger being, that reminds us by our present failures and friction of the greatness of our shortcomings; our business is to take this life of pain and need and use all its provocations, its troubles, difficulties, problems as the curriculum of larger life.

WE OUGHT TO BE GRATEFUL, as they who take life wisely certainly will be, for all that moves us on though it may seem to lay us low at the time of the blow.

True religion is that which places the light of aspiration before a man's eyes and sets in his heart the vision of a life which knows no limit. Religion interprets the universe in terms of a reasonable plan of life, with a hope in life which does not mock us. Religion is the spirit that enables one to trust the ultimate wisdom of the plan of our present imperfection.

The present struggle is the finest thing we have. Not that we need to add to its intensity or increase its complications. But we ought not to try to dodge its demands nor ought we to be blind to its splendid promise. For imperfection is ever the prophecy of development, and he who bravely, hopelessly struggles on, bears, endures, aspires, not only finds the way through the clouds to the stars but in the struggle finds the high and divine in himself.

Here faith plays her part, aiding us to cling to our visions of the larger life and greater universe, giving us confidence even in darkest nights that we do not walk in a maze, to come out where we went in, hearing the mocking laughter of idiot gods. We believe better things of our world, and that means taking our world in a nobler way and trusting that love rules through our imperfections and needs to a wholeness and perfection which we call God, the desire of every soul.

Matt. 7. 1-12. Golden Text,

Matt. 7. 12.

Verse 1. Judge not. What is meant is that we are not to judge others harshly and unkindly. The flaw-picking spirit is wrong because it violates the Golden Rule of the Kingdom. While it is often necessary in the affairs of life to "Imitate the divine goodness."

7. Ask . . . seek . . . knock — A thrice-repeated injunction to pray, with no special climax, the repetition being for emphasis merely.

It shall be given . . . ye shall find — A teaching often on the lips of Jesus. God invariably answers the sincere prayer which is in the name of Christ. We shall not always receive what we ask. But all true prayer is based on the supposition that the petitioner is willing. God should answer according to his wise judgment of what is best for us. If we ask aright and do not receive exactly what we ask, we are sure to receive something just as good, and generally better.

THE CORPORAL'S LESSON

Lance-Corporal Crick — nicknamed the "Sheeny"—spent most of his leisure moments in the laudable endeavor of trying to add a little to his professional income.

He was invariably to be seen hawking a miscellaneous assortment of cheap jewellery, walking-sticks, razors, and shaving-brushes round the barrack-rooms.

Towards the end of the financial week he was obliging enough to accommodate the impecunious amongst his fellows by way of small loans until pay-day, when he expected his friendly advances returned with an augmentation he termed remunerative interest.

Recruits were his favorite customers; consequently, when the youthful, but, uncouth, figure of Private Pym first loomed at the barrack-gate the corporal fairly smacked his lips in anticipation of future profits.

The new recruit had the misfortune to be posted to the same room that the corporal occupied, and five minutes after receiving his first week's pay that worthy smilingly approached him with his wares.

"Ere's a razor," he began, in a seductive voice, "that 'ud scrape hairs off a billiard-ball! If ye think it ain't worth three-an'-six ye can 'ave it for nothing!"

Private Pym took the proffered razor, and, after examining it critically, handed it back.

"Wot—won't ye 'ave it?" cried the corporal reproachfully. "Ye know ye couldn't buy a razor like that under five bob anywhere!"

As a matter of fact, the article would have been dear at eighteenpence.

"I ain't got no money to spare," said the recruit regretfully, "so I can't buy anything!"

"Take it, chum," urged the corporal generously. "Ye can 'ave it on the instalment system. Splendid system that! You never miss a few pence a week!"

Private Pym possessed himself of the razor and several other articles besides, when he found himself nearly ten shillings in the corporal's debt.

The other men in the room laughed at his folly, but the recruit merely smiled in his simple way as he stowed his purchases in his kit-bag.

"Wotever ye want, come to me," said Corporal Crick boasting, "I supply everything from a bootlace to a love-letter!"

"A love-letter!" gasped the recruit, turning his head.

"Yes, if ye want a soul-stirring epistle dashed off, I'm yer man! I'll undertake to bring tears to a heart o' gunmetal, or thaw the North Pole if necessary! But d'ye want a letter written?"

"I may do," answered the recruit, looking gravely at the ceiling. "I ain't a good 'and at that kind o' thing meself, never 'avin' 'ad much eddication—"

"I'll just be your man, then!" cried the corporal, slapping him affectionately on the shoulder. "My charge is only sixpence, an' I'll do it for ye any time!"

That evening Private Pym was alone in the room when Corporal Crick hustled in said Pym lightly. "An' I was goin' t' ast if ye could len' me 'arf-a-crown as well! I should like t' sen' 'Liz—'Lizabeth. I mean — a nice little present that 'ud make her think more kindly of me. You know, when I get the pub, I sha'n't forget you, corporal."

"I 'ope not," grunted the corporal, forking out the desired coin.

A few mornings later, Private Pym was the recipient of a letter which caused him to jump about the barrack-room like an angry bull, and to throw menacing glances in Corporal Crick's direction.

"Wot's the matter?" inquired the corporal, drawing him aside.

"Why, everything's 'the matter'!" roared Pym. "'Liz—'Lizabeth says I never wrote that nice, graceful letter she's received! But if I would bring the young man who composed it to the Aerial Arms an' interdooce 'im, she'd give me a pint o' beer all to meself!"

The corporal whistled softly and looked extremely pleased.

"I'll tell ye wot I'll do," he spoke at length, "pay me a shillin' for the trouble, an' I'll write another letter to her tellin' her that you've bin to school since ye joined the Army, an' are now ord'ly-room clerk!"

"I ain't got a shillin'," grumbled the other. "Fact is, I was wantin' t' borrow a bit more from you t' sen' her another present."

"Ye owe me a tidy bit already," the corporal reminded him.

"Yes, ye've bin very good," declared Pym gratefully, "an' I sha'n't forget yer kindness when I gets the pub."

"Ye may never get it!" broke in Corporal Crick excitedly. "Yer 'Lizabeth may chuck ye!"

"She can't chuck me!" replied Pym, with assurance. "We're engaged! See, this is our talisman, as she calls it"—pulling a broken sixpence out of his pocket, and exhibiting it in his palm. "She promised never to throw me over while I kep' this 'arf of the sixpence!"

"Quite romantic!" exclaimed the corporal. "I've often heard of them things, but never saw one before. Of course, ye wouldn't part with it? Stay, though! You say ye want a loan? Well, I want security, an' I'm willin' t' advance ye 'arf a sovereign on yer talisman!"

"Only 'arf a sovereign?" queried Pym, in astonishment. "If ye made it a quid, now, we may do business."

"Wot! A sovereign for 'arf an oie sixpence? Not me!"

"Her initials are cut in it," Pym went on urheedingly, "cut wi' her own fair 'and, too!"

"Give it to me!" gasped the corporal, in a choking voice. "A sovereign for a broken sixpence — I must be mad!"

Lance-Corporal Crick had been away on leave several days, when one evening, after "Lights Out," he burst into the room rather unexpectedly and began pulling Private Pym out of bed.

"Ere—old on! Wot's up?" spluttered the sleeper, rousing himself and staring with blinking eyes at the aggressor.

"I'll give ye 'wot's up'!" bellowed the corporal, taking him by the throat. "Where's me money?"

"Wot money?" gurgled Pym, ginning his assailant by the nose.

"The quids, an' 'arf quids, an' five bobs ye've 'ad oater me!"

Verse 1. Judge not—What is meant is that we are not to judge others harshly and unkindly. The flaw-picking spirit is wrong because it violates the Golden Rule of the kingdom. While it is often necessary in the affairs of life to make frank and even severe criticism of the conduct of other people, it is never necessary to exercise toward them that loveless attitude which magnifies their faults and takes no account of their virtues.

That ye be not judged—The man who makes his own ideas and conduct the criterion by which he condemns others, thereby condemns himself, for he comes short of the highest standard.

2. With what judgment ye judge—If you set yourself up as a censor, and condemn men according to your low standards, you must expect to be judged in the same way. Before the judgment seat of Christ your condemnation, according to his law of love, will be certain. If you give to others an unjust measure of fault-finding, you need not expect free forgiveness will be measured out to you. It is this divine judgment that is meant, rather than the judgment other men may pass on us in return for the judgment we pass on them.

3. Motus—A twig of insignificant size, standing for your brother's comparatively small inconsistency.

Beam—Such great timber as is used in the construction of a roof or floor. The want of love in the heartless critic is a fault many times larger than the minute defect he censures. In both this verse and the one preceding, Jesus is following Jewish proverbial. These, however, are largely commercial in spirit. Jesus embodies them with a higher meaning. We are to regard the faults of other people's conduct and character not in a self-righteous way, but with humility and sympathy.

How can it be impossible to see from inside to a man who, as Jesus is a holy desire to make the world better by eliminating sinners from the ranks of his brethren, is unwilling to begin with self-improvement.

See clearly—It requires keen eyes to make a reformer, and no man can qualify who has not sincere motives and a pure heart.

Do not put that which is holy unto the dogs—The earliest reference to this verse is in the Teaching of the Twelve Apostles, where Christ says, "I have allowed people to partake of the Lord's Supper who have not been baptized." Of course there is a broader meaning. Things which are of great worth ought not to be dealt out indiscriminately to everybody. There are some who are the most precious animals, and here testify men of great value who are fully absorbed in the pursuit of material things, then they would treat with scorn and indignity all offerings of the people of spiritual truth.

7-11. Without figuring the meaning, generally these verses may be made to express like a natural part of the content of the Sermon, in this way: If you despise your people of law, and if you for proffering of you a million no obligation to make further a traces in all other cases, you must treat others as you wish them to treat you, and as the heavenly Father does treat you.

1 Christ. We shall not always receive what we ask. But all true prayer is based on the supposition that the petitioner is willing. God should answer according to his wise judgment of what is best for us. If we ask aright and do not receive exactly what we ask, we are sure to receive something just as good, and generally better.

9. What man—Jesus here proceeds according to the common method of unfolding the character of God by calling attention to what is known of the best in men.

Loaf . . . stone; fish . . . serpent (10)—Note the similarity between the loaf and the stone, and between the fish and the serpent. Jesus was tempted to turn the stones into loaves. The point is that God will not mock us when we pray by giving only the semblance of an answer, or something worthless and harmful.

11. Ye . . . being evil—The word "evil" here means "selfish," "niggardly," rather than "sinful." The contrast is between the limited love of men and the absolute love of God.

How much more—A favorite way of arguing from lower to higher. Compare Matt. 6: 26, 29; Rom. 5: 3. God must always be thought of as infinitely better than man at his best.

Shall your Father . . . give good things—The light thrown on the divine Providence by this lesson and the last one is intensified by Paul's fuller statement in Rom. 8: 25, 32.

12. This is in reality the climax of the Sermon on the Mount, the main body of which began with the words, "Think not that I came to destroy the law and the prophets," and now sums up with the Golden Rule, which, says Jesus, is the law and the prophets. It is such, inasmuch as universal love is the imperfectly grasped ideal of the Old Testament. What the law and the prophets were aiming at can only be reached, when each man respects the individuality and observes the rights of every other man, honors and treats every other man as he in their places would wish to be honored and treated, gives such sympathy and assistance to others as he would himself like to receive. Legalism says, "Do your neighbor no harm"; the gospel says, "Do him all the good you can."

Therefore—Because it is the fulfillment of the law, there is no other alternative for the Christian but to practice, in all things, the rule of brotherly love.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

Combs should never be washed but cleaned out with hard brush and cloth.

Fresh meat should never be allowed to remain in paper. It absorbs the juices.

Calico shrinks in the washing. When making it up allow one inch to the yard for this.

Do not salt stock till it has been thoroughly skinned, as the salt prevents seum from rising.

When the color has been taken out of silks by fruit stains, ammonia will usually restore it.

Never give hot buttered toast to invalids; there is nothing more injurious to dyspeptic persons.

SURE.

"I wonder how the present year will end."

"Oh, there'll be nothing to it."

ecruit, looking gravely at the ceiling. "I ain't a good 'ad at that kind o' thing meself, never 'avin' 'ad much eddication—"

"I'll just be your man, then!" cried the corporal, slapping him affectionately on the shoulder. "My charge is only sixpence, an' I'll do it for ye any time!"

That evening Private Pym was alone in the room when Corporal Crick bustled in.

"Well, shall I dash off that letter for ye now?" he asked, clearing a space on the table.

"I don't think it'll be much good," said Pym, forlornly. "Me an' her got on very well 'tgether till her father come inter a lot o' money an' bought a pub in Walworth. Now she thinks I ain't good enough—"

"She'll change her tune when she's read my letter," the corporal quietly informed him. "Just fire off a few details an' trust me to do the remainder."

"I dunno 'ow to begin," stammered the recruit, plaintively. "Ye see, 'avin' 'ad no eddication, me thoughts don't run like a water-spout. I can think o' nothin' but the fine pub she 'as."

Strange to say, the corporal's own thoughts were running in the same direction.

"Well, well," said he, "give me her monaker, the color of her 'air an' eyes, an' I bet I earn my tanner."

"I used to call her 'Liz,'" began Pym wistfully, "but since her father took the pub she thinks that name ain't quite the thing—"

"No more it ain't," put in the corporal. "Lizabeth has a more classy sound. I'll begin, 'My darling 'Lizabeth'—but wait till I get the ink an' paper! Now!—seating himself at the table, and reading aloud as he wrote.—"My darling 'Lizabeth.—Since last I saw you, the sun has ceased to shine. Being blind to all but you, I can see no other light but that"—(a long pause)—"reflected from your dear eyes—"

"Good heavens! 'Liz'll think I'm off me rocker!" cried Pym in alarm.

"Ow can I write if you keep chewin' the rag?" admonished the corporal, continuing his writing in silence.

"Now," as he brought his letter to a close, "wot's yer Christian name?"

"Peter," lisped the recruit.

"I remain your ever true adorer, Peter Pym," read the corporal with a complacent smirk. "Ere 'ave a dekkio"—pushing the letter across to him—"an' tell me wot ye think of it."

"Why, her little peepers ain't pink!" gasped Private Pym wrathfully. "Nor her sweet little nose ain't red like a cherry!"

"A thousand pardons!" cried the corporal contritely, taking the letter again. "The colors of her cheeks an' mouth an' eyes 'ave got mixed up a little. But I'll soon rectify that."

"I 'ope I'll git the pub!" sighed Private Pym.

"It won't be my fault if ye don't," the corporal assured him. "Now for the address!"

"Miss 'Lizabeth Brown," said Pym slowly. "Got that down? Aerial Arms, Bluff Street, Walworth."

"Right!" cried Corporal Crick. "Now for the tanner."

"Ot, ye'll 'ave t' put that down in the book wi' the remainder," spluttered the sleeper, rousing only himself and staring with blinking eyes at the aggressor.

"I'll give ye 'wot's up'!" bellowed the corporal, taking him by the throat. "Where's me money?"

"Wot money?" gurgled Pym, gnawing his assailant by the nose.

"The quids, an' 'arf quids, an' five bobs ye've 'ad enter me!" groaned the corporal, tightening his grip. "An' the cuffers ye've told me, ye big, lying skunk!"

The other men in the room began to cry out at being woken up, and many epithets, and heavy nailed boots were hurled at the disputants as they struggled in the gray darkness.

"Fetch the sergeant-major, one of you!" cried Private Pym, panting with the exertion of wriggling out of the blankets and gaining his feet. "I'll charge 'im wi' assault an' battery!"

"Wot's all the row about?" cried several voices in chorus.

"Yes, explain yer conduct!" ordered Pym, giving the corporal's nose another tweak. "Comin' in an' draggin' an' inoffensive man out o' bed when 'e's asleep!"

"The Aerial Arms will explain it," stormed the corporal. "Where's yer Aerial Arms, I'd like t' know!"

"Wot's that to do wi' you?" demanded Pym, freeing himself and flinging the other off.

"It's got everything t' do wi' me!" roared the corporal. "Wot d'ye think I advanced ye the quid for?"

"Don't trot out my private affairs in public, please!" Pym cautioned him.

"Private affairs?" sneered the corporal. "Why, ye ain't got no private affairs! I've spent four days in London a-searchin' for your blessed pub, but there ain't no sich name!"

"I know there ain't!" said Pym coolly.

"An' there ain't no 'Lizabeth either, I suppose?" cried Corporal Crick in tragic tones.

"There ain't!" said Private Pym as coolly as before.

Half-smothered laughs broke from various parts of the room.

"Wot about my money, then?" yelled the corporal, rushing at him again in sheer rage.

"Old!" cried Private Pym warningly. "Remember, I can play at that game as well as any other! If ye value yer stripe ye'll turn in to bed a' leave me alone. I shall never pay ye a farthing, as I think wot I've 'ad from ye is little enough for the lesson I've taught ye! In future attend to yer duty an' don't try to make so much money outer yer mates!"

Lance-Corporal Crick turned into bed, but during the night several agonizing groans were heard coming from that corner of the room in which he slept.—London Answers.

CRUELTY.

"On what ground, madam, do you desire a divorce from your husband?"

"Intolerable cruelty; he put the date of my birth in the family Bible."

AND SHE DIDN'T.

"He proposed to her last night?"

"How do you know?"

"She told me not to tell."

TESTED RECIPES.

Escalloped Oysters.—One pint oysters without liquor, two cups cracker crumbs, salt and pepper to taste, good sized piece butter cut into small pieces, small cup of milk. Mix all together, put into a buttered baking dish and bake until browned about thirty minutes.

Mayonnaise.—Three tablespoonfuls butter, one tablespoonful flour, one and one-half teaspoonful salt, one-half teaspoonful sugar, one teaspoonful mustard, three well beaten eggs, one-half pint sweet milk, one-fourth pint vinegar, pinch cayenne pepper. Mix ingredients together as written out; cook in double boiler, stirring all the time. When thickened remove from fire, beat well for twelve minutes. This makes one pint. Kept cool will last indefinitely. When wanted, one tablespoonful of mayonnaise, add one tablespoonful of cream.

Snowballs.—Cream half cupful of butter, add gradually one cupful of sugar, half cupful of milk, two and a quarter cupfuls of flour, three and a half teaspoonfuls of baking powder, sifted together, add whites of four eggs beaten stiff. Steam thirty-five minutes in buttered cups and serve with strawberry sauce.

Fruit Cake Recipe.—When you are making bread take one cupful of the sponge, a large cupful of sugar, one cupful of raisins and dates, one cupful of currants and figs and citron, one cupful of flour, one-half cupful of butter, two eggs. Mix all together, with the sponge. One teaspoonful of soda dissolved in one tablespoonful of hot water, one teaspoonful of cloves, one teaspoonful of cinnamon. Put in pan to bake and let it raise for two hours. This cake will not hurt the most delicate of stomachs. Try it.

FOREIGN RECIPES.

Danish Dumplings.—Take one tablespoonful of butter and put it into a small stewpan. Set over fire and stir into it one cupful of flour, then one cupful of water. Mix and stir this over the fire until it forms around the spoon and does not adhere to pan. Take from fire and cool. When cold beat into it one egg and season with salt and nutmeg. Beat hard for ten minutes and in the meantime have a kettle on stove with boiling salt water. With a tablespoon form the dumplings and drop into water. Boil ten minutes. These are delicious with chicken fricassee or milk or broth soup.

Beef Chop Suey.—Grind two and a half pounds of beef in a food-chopper and enough onions to season it. Add three-quarters of a can of tomatoes and a little finely chopped suet. Mix well up in a baking dish. Then add one-quarter of a package of boiled macaroni. Put in a granite pan and bake in quick oven forty-five minutes.

Royal Chop Suey.—Fry in olive oil or butter three slices of bacon, two medium sized sliced onions, three stalks of celery cut fine. When the onions are soft, add one cupful of water, one-half pound cold apple, one-half cupful orange, pulp alone to be used, all the inner membrane being removed, and one-quarter cupful nuts. Serve with French or sweet mayonnaise dressing. At a luncheon we should suggest the mayonnaise, and for a heavy dinner the French dressing.

USEFUL HINTS.

Store soap for a month before using. Cut it into pieces and pile up in a dry place so that the air can get to it.

Keep above the sink a box containing borax and a bottle of ammonia for removing grease from pots and pans.

A small piece of charcoal boiled with cabbage will prevent the unpleasant smell which arises from the vegetable.

Old hairbrushes which have become soft can be made quite hard and firm by dipping them in a strong solution of alum.

The yolks of eggs left over when the whites only are wanted will keep for several days if they are covered with cold water.

A joint of meat may be kept sweet for many days of wrapped in a fine cloth wrung out in vinegar and hung in the air.

In case of fire, a wet silk handkerchief tied over the nose and mouth is a complete security against suffocation from smoke.

Onions cut into small pieces and placed in a room where there is fresh paint will absorb the odor. One large onion is enough.

To remove iron rust, wet the spots with salt and lemon juice, hold the material over the steam of a teakettle, and then put out in the sun.

Vegetable refuse, such as potato peelings and cabbage leaves, should be burned at the back of the kitchen fire; they burn well and save coal.

If a teapot or coffee-pot is discolored on the inside, boil it in a strong solution of borax for a short time, and all its brightness will return.

When frying anything in deep fat have the flour sifter full of flour handy. If the fat catches fire, sprinkle thickly with flour and save disaster.

Silk articles should not be folded in white papers, as the chloride of lime used in bleaching the paper will impair the color of the silk.

If your table salt is found to be damp, mix a teaspoonful of corn-flour with it the next time you fill the saltcellars and you will always have dry salt.

Before using new enamelled cooking utensils grease them inside with butter. This prevents the enamel from cracking and chipping quickly.

To freshen your ferns and house plants, pour cold tea on them every three or four days, and you will soon see how much better they look.

Never boil a silk handkerchief, or rub soap on it. Wash in suds made of fine white soap, squeeze out, half dry in the sun and iron while damp.

Individual tarts are much served now-a-days with fruit or pumpkin filling and with ice cream or whipped cream on top; with them serve coffee.

Mustard should be mixed with milk; this prevents it becoming hard and brown. Do not use vinegar, as this destroys the flavor of the mustard.

After having washed lamp chimneys in soap and water scald with clear water. They can be dried

HARVEST IN BABYLONIA

THE DAY WHEN ALL DEBTS WERE PAID.

In Babylonian the Food Problem Dominated all the Affairs of Life.

In the wonderful restoration of the ancient past which has resulted from the work of the explorer in the East nothing is more astonishing than the knowledge we have gained of the social life, manners and customs of the ancient inhabitants of Egypt, Babylonia and other Eastern centres of civilization.

In this respect the discoveries in Babylonia have been far more enlightening than any others, for in that land education was more general, extending to the lower grades of the community, and the literary tendency of the people leading them to have a written record for any event supplies us with a mass of details of the affairs of daily life far more vivid than in the case of any other people of antiquity.

Babylonia was the garden of the ancient East, as later tradition made it the site of the "Garden of Eden," and the ancient Sumerian population was the earliest organized community of agriculturists of whom we have record, says W. St. Chad Boscawen in the London Globe.

THE NATURE OF THE SOIL.

A deep alluvial, made it a land of the richest kind for the agriculturist, and nature needed but little assistance at the hand of man to bring forth her richest and best to supply his wants.

Although not the indigenous home of wheat, that being undoubtedly the slopes of the mountain of Luristan and the plain of Elam, where settlements of pre-historic harvesters have been found, it soon became the cornfield par excellence of western Asia, and in later times the granary of the Persian empire.

The early Sumerian settlers brought with them from the home land on the east of the Tigris the first elements of agriculture and soon the plains of Lower Chaldea became covered with corn fields. One of the oldest inscriptions we possess, that of Manishtu-su, King of Kish, which must date back to about B. C. 4000 if not earlier, is a purely agricultural record and shows that the principles of agriculture were already developed and systematized. The value of land was estimated on corn valuation, and the rights of landlord and the tenant were clearly defined. Moreover, the ancient records show that the calendar of those early inhabitants of Chaldea was agricultural and started from the autumnal equinox—the period of the "greater harvest."

In remote prehistoric times man had been the pensioner of Nature, dependent on the supplies she granted him, but now man by his invention of agricultural implements had and by his assistance rendered her far more lavish in according him supplies for his wants. The extreme fertility of the Chaldean plain soon made it the corn producing centre of the whole of western Asia, and as food was the source

MAN OF MODERATE MEANS.

His Regular Smoke—What He Uses When He's Feeling Rich.

"All things," said the man of moderate means, "impress us by comparison. If a man had lived all his life in a palace it would have to be a very grand sort of a place indeed that would seem anything particularly fine to him, whereas if he had lived always in a shack a very modest house would seem to him luxurious.

If since they first came in we had been driving steadily a ten thousand dollar automobile then obviously it would take quite considerable of a kerosene cart to give us any added joy in that line, while if we had been accustomed constantly to ride in the subway even the simplest of gasoline gigs might give us great glee. All things go by comparison.

Take, for instance, smoking. My regular smoke is a stogie that costs $1.45 a hundred, but I buy also, for special occasions a special brand of cigars for which I pay $2 a hundred; I buy a fifty box at a time for a dollar. Commonly smoke the stogies, and I think they're pretty good, at a little less than a cent and a half a smoke, but if I happen to strike a little streak of luck I blow myself to a couple of those choice smokes out of the other box, in which really I find great pleasure.

It's all by comparison. Some men would have to pay $10 for a cigar to get any fun out of it. I can get a lot of fun out of a two center.

And speaking of great pleasure I'm glad I have not exhausted all my great pleasures; I've still got them all, or mostly all, to enjoy. My capacity for novelty and enjoyment has never been much taxed; it is still practically boundless. I have got life ahead of me, not behind, and when I do get money, as I certainly hope to do some day, everything will be new and charming to me and I shall enjoy everything immensely.

I've got something to look forward to anyway and I think there's something in that."

SHE HAD LISTENED.

It was a private entertainment, and a lady had just risen from the piano.

"Wouldn't you like to be able to sing and play, my dear?" she queried of a little five-year-old miss.

"No, ma'am," was the unexpected reply.

"And why not?" asked the lady. "Cause," explained the small observer, "I wouldn't like to have people say such horrid things about me."

CONQUERED NATURE

and by his assistance rendered her far more lavish in according him supplies for his wants. The extreme fertility of the Chaldean plain soon made it the corn producing centre of the whole of western Asia, and as food was the equivalent of money it soon became the predominant partner in the world of commerce.

As a result of the old primitive barter system payments in kind ruled instead of cash payments and corn became money. Surplus supplies of corn or other food stuffs became income or capital and could minister to the luxury of the successful agriculturist. With the rise of the village community and later the city kingdom this increase of wealth became a source of revenue on which the heads of the community could draw for communal wants, and in this manner there grew up the first and greatest system of revenue ever found in ancient Oriental lands.

Ancient Babylonia possessed one feature in which it closely resembled our own country in the Middle Ages, the bulk of the property was in religious hands. That is, the various districts into which the land was divided were each the fief of the province god. The tablets from Tell-lo show that all that district was the fief of the god Nin-gir-si; of Nippur the fief of Entil, or the older "Bel"; of Sippara, and all the revenues were collected by the temple officials and paid into the temple treasury and classed as "the wealth or property of the god."

THE SUN GOD.

There were many villages and small towns in the fief of the province gods, and their revenues were collected by resident collectors and either remitted to the head city or stored in the local storehouse, and a very careful account of them sent to headquarters. All the dues were collected at one time, on "the day of harvest." When the harvest time came it was indeed a time of business pressure, the culmination of the year, the great day of reckoning. The deeds which have been recovered from the treasures of the Babylonian temples amply prove this.

Everything became due on the day of harvest. Thus a loan tablet from Nippur says: "Five and a half shekels, which X borrowed from the Sun-god to the Sun-god he shall pay back with the interest on the day of harvest." All small tradesmen were paid at harvest, and among them the obliging publican, who had given credit for beer during the previous months to his customers. All wages were paid at harvest time.

Flour the fruit, add the spices, then mix in the order given. Mix soft, roll thick, cut out, and bake quickly.

THE MYSTERY CLEARED UP;

OR, THE HERITAGE OF MADAME YALTA.

CHAPTER II.—(Cont'd)

Maxime saw it was useless to insist. Georget evidently was honest with him. He had lucid moments but his mind was quickly obscured. His brain resembled one of those capricious watches that suddenly stop and start off again when vigorously shaken.

"And the Countess Yalta, did you know her?" he asked suddenly, as he led Georget toward the Avenue de Villiers.

"That I do. She is a friend of grandmamma's."

"Then you go to her house?"
"Oh, very often. It is so pretty, and there are more pictures than at the museum, and she isn't a bit prouder for it all, the countess isn't. Whenever I go there she has served up for me—a queer kind of dish it is—fish roe on bread and butter."

This way of designating the Russian dish caviare, made Maxime smile without diverting him from his investigation.

"What does she talk to you about?" he asked.

"All sorts of things. Wait! the last time I saw her was—all I know is she was ill and received me on a great bed like the one in the Louis XIV. chamber at Versailles. She asked me about M. de Carnoel."

"And could you tell her?"

"I don't know; it seems to me I hadn't seen him for three or four days."

"Would you like to see him again?"

"Oh, yes."

"Then let us go to my uncle's. Vignory, may be, can tell us where he is. For my part I don't know."

"I will go wherever you wish, M. Maxime, but if I once set foot in the office they won't let me off again, and I like better to walk."

"Never fear. They will not keep you. You are free until you can make use of your arm again."

"My arm! I had forgotten that, but it is so; I am one-handed for awhile yet, but I could run errands all the same."

"I answer for it Vignory will not keep you, and that he will receive you kindly too. They are fond of you there—my uncle and my cousin Alice."

"She is so good; is it true she is to marry M. de Carnoel?"

"I believe not. He has left the house."

"But he will soon come back?"
"No one can tell. I am trying to find him."

After this reply the conversation suddenly ceased, to Maxime's great regret. Georget, who had chattered incessantly since he left his grandmother's lodge, now fell into a profound meditation. Maxime looked at him out of the corner of his eye, and from the serious expression on his infantine countenance, he saw that the child

"Then you did get in some times?"

"I believe so—but I'm not very sure."

"Try to remember."

"I do try, but I can't."

Maxime made a sign to Vignory, who went apart with him to one end of the long, narrow closet.

"Well, what do you say to that?" he asked. "Do you think I was right in suspecting this boy of being concerned in the theft?"

"The chap must at least have furnished some indications to the thieves. But that does not prove M. de Carnoel to be innocent," he added, timidly.

"You suppose that he could have had an understanding with Georget—in fact, it is not impossible. Georget was devoted to him."

"And does he know where he is?" asked the cashier in a husky voice.

"He has known, most likely, but has forgotten—like all the rest."

"Do you believe this loss of memory is not acting?"

"If it were, he would not have been so imprudent. He was not obliged to commit himself as he has done. At any rate, it would be well to question him thoroughly. The sight of the safe has brought him to the desired point. If I lose this opportunity, I might never recover it."

"Hey! Georget, what are you thinking about?"

"Nothing," replied the child, "I was just waiting for M. Vignory to send me on an errand."

"M. Vignory has nothing for you to-day."

"So much the worse. I would rather be on the streets than in the waiting-room, though sometimes you can have fun there too. Such droll people come in!"

"We might lay a wager that you play tricks on them."

"Never, M. Maxime. Malicorne must have told you that."

"Why Malicorne?"

"Because he don't like me. He is wrong. I could have had him sent off and I didn't."

"You!"

"Yes; I had only to tell that he was never at his post, and that in the evening anybody can walk in the office as if it were a mill. I've done it myself."

"Come! you always decamp when six o'clock strikes."

"That's true. I have friends who wait for me before the Madeleine at quarter past six. Still, I'm sure I have stayed here,—at least once,—when nobody was about. I remember how afraid I was."

"Afraid of what?"

"Of everything. At night the office is only lighted by the gas jet at the corner, the great safe looks like a huge giant, and mice are running under your feet,—it makes your flesh creep."

"They shut you up while you

"I did not see the lady. Ladislav was alone."

"Think well. It was, perhaps, the same who left the Rink with me. You know I met there a woman; that I came away with her, and that you followed us."

"Don't tell me that, M. Maxime; that mixes me all up."

"Then let us go back to Ladislav. He didn't like Borisoff, as he stole his box?"

"Borisoff is a brigand."

"Good! But what did he do to Ladislav?"

Georget put his hands over his forehead, but made no answer.

"I cannot," he murmured, with a despairing expression. It is over. I know nothing more."

Maxime was desperate. He saw that his friend thought the scene ridiculous, and still doubted the good faith of the boy. Vignory in this affair could not be impartial.

He thought of his vanished rival who was still formidable, and cursed the fever of investigation that had taken possession of Maxime Dorgeres.

"What good is to be done by bringing up all this?" he thought; "and what use can be made of the testimony of an idiot?"

And drawing Maxime aside, he said in his ear:

"What are you hoping to arrive at? That this frightful gamin knew and aided the thieves is evident, but what of it? For my part, I have seen enough of Georget. Take him where he came from, and let use talk of this no more."

"So be it," replied Maxime, a little piqued. "Come, Georget," he added, pushing the child toward the door. Vignory made no effort to detain him. The friends shook hands and separated without another word. Vignory resumed his verification of accounts. Maxime passed through the office and went out with Georget.

He was by no means of the same opinion as his uncle's partner—this headstrong Maxime. The boy's silence on certain points served only to stimulate him in the chase after discoveries; urged him forward in pursuit without regard to where it would lead, and without respect of persons. He had an unexpected meeting in the gateway with Mlle. Dorgeres, guarded by the inevitable Mme. Martineau. She had grown paler, but was still lovely, and her sweet face brightened as she perceived Maxime and Georget.

NOT GOING TO TAKE IT.

Hamish was a thrifty Scot, like many of his race, an enthusiast over golf. But one day Hamish had such peculiar and unpleasant feelings that he reluctantly consulted a physician.

"You've overdone the matter of exercise, man," said the doctor, after Hamish had detailed his symptoms. "You must give yourself a day's quiet now and then, and avoid exposure. How often do you play golf?"

"Every day but the Sabbath," said Hamish, rising.

"You must be more temperate at it," said the physician. "Twice a week in good weather is enough for you."

"Good day!" said Hamish, moving toward the door.

"You've not paid me for my advice," said the doctor, who knew his man.

"Nae, for I'm nae takking it," said Hamish, as he reached the door and made his escape.

DID THE SAME HIMSELF.

First Boy—"The preacher said that when the contribution box went round everybody thought to themselves not how much they could give, but how little they could give without feelin' ashamed. Now, I'd jest like to know how he can tell what people is thinkin' about."

Second Boy—"Of course he knows how folks feel. Before he got to be a minister he used to sit in the congregation himself."

Fair Millionaire—"Oh, Vladimir, they say you are a fortune-hunter, and are only marrying me for my wealth. Tell me that this is not true." Lord Dedbrooke—"Why, my dearest, I would marry you if you were penniless." Fair Millionaire—"Prove this, my own Vladimir, and I shall be absolutely happy." Lord Dedbrooke—"Settle the whole of your vast fortune upon me, leaving yourself destitute, and I will wed you in the face of the whole world."

After this reply the conversation suddenly ceased, to Maxime's great regret. Georget, who had chattered incessantly since he left his grandmother's lodge, now fell into a profound meditation. Maxime looked at him out of the corner of his eye, and from the serious expression on his infantine countenance, he saw that the child was making prodigious efforts to collect his thoughts. Evidently the name of Carmel had awakened confused recollections. The silence was prolonged, and while they passed down the Boulevard Malesherbes, Georget did not once open his lips. He suffered himself to be led by the Rue de Suresnes, and it was not until he had passed the door of the banker's house that he recovered his speech.

"Hold!" he cried, "that lad has on my vest buttons and cap. It doesn't keep him from looking like a simpleton though."

Maxime did not see fit to inform the boy that the groom in question was his substitute. He excused himself also from making any explanations to the porter who came out of his hole and looked at Georget, come back to life, with a thunder-struck visage.

He found Vignory busied in arranging the papers in the safe, and on seeing Maxime he exclaimed. "What, you again?"

"Again! is not very amiable, but I forgive you, for you appear to be over head and ears in work. I will not disturb you long. I only wish to present a lad of your acquaintance. What has become of him?" he added, turning round.

Georget had managed to glide behind him to avoid confronting the cashier, and was crouching down by the side of the safe. To bring him before Vignory, Maxime had to take the child by the collar.

"So here you are!" exclaimed the cashier, much surprised that Maxime had brought him a boy whom he had accused that very morning of being the author or accomplice of the theft. "You are cured, then? But no, you have only one arm. How is the other?"

"The other is hanging to my neck. I only beat with one wing, but it's all the same, M. Vignory, if you want me."

"Then you don't know that the patron has filled your place?"

"With this great canary bird that I met just now? I suspected as much. Hold!" he cried suddenly. "you have changed the word. It was Mlle. Alice, and now—"

"How do you know that?" asked Vignory, stupefied.

"Because I saw it. And before that there was another."

The nephew and the cashier exchanged significant glances.

"And the trap," continued Georget, "the iron arms which catch thieves? Ah! here they are."

Maxime, as much agitated as his friend, took the child by the arm and led him toward the closet which the new partner of M. Dorgeres had arranged for his private use.

Vignory understood and followed. They pushed Georget in and shut themselves up with him.

"You have fixed this little hole up nicely. It was so full of old papers there wasn't room for the patron's Newfoundland."

"But you could get in, could you?" asked Maxime, quickly.

"Dame! I'm not as large as the —when nobody was about. I remember how afraid I was."

"Afraid of what?"

"Of everything. At night the office is only lighted by the gas jet at the corner, the great safe looks like a huge giant, and mice are running under your feet,—it makes your flesh creep."

"They shut you up while you were asleep?"

"Perhaps."

"And you didn't call to them to let you out?"

"I don't know."

"Then you saw no one?"

"No,—no one."

"How did you get out?"

"I don't know."

Maxime stamped his foot with impatience. The exasperating, "I do not know," came back like a refrain to cut short all progress. There was nothing left but to begin again.

Vignory knit his brows and shrugged his shoulders.

"Do you know Col. Borisoff?"

"Col. Borisoff! That I do. I have seen him at least three times."

I was here when he came to get a box he had left with the patron. I don't like him, this Borisoff."

"Why?"

"Oh, first, because I don't like Russians. Neither does grandmamma."

"What have they done to her?"

"Many things in former times,—things that I have forgotten; and I don't like the way he talks. One might suppose he was a hand-organ grinding out the Grace de Dieu. What fun I had taking him off that morning! He saw me and began to growl at me, and I might have fared badly if M. Vignory hadn't opened just then."

"M. Borisoff would have done well to give you a lesson," said Vignory. "The patron didn't pay you to make fun of his clients and listen at doors."

Maxime hastened to resume the conversation, fearing that Vignory's ill-humor would spoil everything.

"Bah!" he said, "everybody has a right to laugh a little. And I don't think much of Col. Borisoff either. Did he get his casket?"

"No, for it was not there."

"Some one had taken it away?" he asked eagerly.

"For certain."

"Who?"

"Wait; let me think. It was now the fog is rising in my head. I had the name and it has flown."

"Ladislav!" said Maxime, at a venture.

"Yes, that is it," cried Georget, clapping his hands.

"And the lady?"

"The lady—what lady?"

"The one that owned the horses that Ladislav trained; you spoke of her to me."

Georget began to reflect, and replied slowly:

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are just the medicine growing girls need. Every dose helps to make new, rich blood, thus helping languid, despondent girls on to the full bloom of womanhood, making them robust, cheerful and attractive. Mrs. Albert Putman, Port Robinson, Ont., says: "A couple of years ago my daughter Hattie, now fifteen, was in declining health. She complained of severe headaches, had no appetite, was very pale, and exhausted at the least exertion. As time passed on she was hardly able to drag herself about, notwithstanding that she was under medical treatment and continuously taking medicine. At this juncture a neighbor strongly advised me to give Hattie Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I decided to do so. After she had taken three boxes some improvement was noticed; the headaches were not so frequent, nor so severe, and her appetite was much improved. This was indeed cheering and she continued taking the Pills until she had used some eight boxes, when she was as well as ever she had been in her life, and since that time she has been as robust as any girl could wish to be. I would strongly urge all mothers of growing girls to keep their health fortified through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills can be had from any medicine dealer or by mail from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50.

DANGEROUS COLLARS.

A Paris cabman was sitting on his box, and struck a fuse (of the kind manufactured by the Government) to light his pipe, when a spark from the match flew on to his collar. This collar was made of celluloid, and at once took fire, with the result that the cabbie was severely burnt about the face and neck.

Impurities of the Blood Counteracted.—Impurities in the blood come from defects in the action of the liver. They are revealed by pimples and unsightly blotches on the skin. They must be treated inwardly, and for this purpose there is no more effective compound to be used than Parmelee's Vegetable Pills. They act directly on the liver and by setting up healthy processes have a beneficial effect upon the blood, so that impurities are eliminated.

NOTHING LIKE IT.

Two railway travellers got into conversation, and one of them began to expatiate on the advantages of fresh air.

"Ah," he said, "there's nothing like having your bedroom doors and your windows open at night—nothing like it. Great advantage I have found it many a time."

"Ah," said the other gentleman, "I suppose you're a medical man, and speak from experience."

"No," said the first man, as he lifted his bag and prepared to alight at a station. "I'm not a medical man. Between ourselves, in strict confidence, I'm a burglar," and he opened the carriage door and vanished.

IT'S THE TALK OF THE COUNTRYSIDE

HOW DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS CURED MRS. SAMUEL THOMPSON'S DROPSY.

Her's Was a Terrible Case and the Doctors were Powerless to Check It, but the Great Kidney Remedy Cured It.

Holt, Ont., Jan. 31 (Special).—All the country side about here is talking of the wonderful cure of Mrs. Samuel Thompson of this place. She was taken sick with Jaundice, and though the doctor was called in she grew steadily worse. Her stomach was so bad she could not keep anything on it. Dropsy set in and she bloated to a terrible size. The doctor came three times to tap her, but her husband would not allow him to do it, saying that if she could not get better they might let her die in peace. Finally she dropped the doctors and tried other medicines, but they did her no good. Her leg burst and the water streamed from it. Then someone told her about Dodd's Kidney Pills and so she asked her husband to get her a box.

After taking them a while she took a bad turn. Something would come in her throat and she would vomit. The water would just fly from her mouth. But from that time she commenced to get better, and to-day she is a well woman. Dodd's Kidney Pills cured her.

Dodd's Kidney Pills cure Dropsy by putting the kidneys in condition to take the surplus water out of the blood. They always cure it.

SOMETHING PRACTICAL.

"William," said Aunt Ann Skiles to her husband, after the supper dishes had been cleared away, "let's go and hear the lecture to-night." Uncle Billy had forgotten that there was a lecture, and when he was reminded that a returned missionary was going to tell all about India at the church, he did not seem overenthusiastic.

"I oughtn't to go anywhere to-night," grumbled Uncle Billy. "I ought to be doctoring my sick horse."

"Well, you're not doing it, and you're not likely to do it. Get ready and no."

Uncle Billy meekly obeyed. He sat patiently through the lecture, which was both interesting and profitable. At the close of his discourse the returned missionary said:

"I will wait a few minutes now for the purpose of answering any questions that interested persons in the audience may wish to ask."

For half a minute nobody spoke. Then, to the horror of Aunt Ann and the astonishment of the congregation, Uncle Billy leaned forward and asked:

"What do they use in India to cure horses that have got the leavies?"

"WHO'LL BUY MY LAVENDER?"

When lavender pillows are put in a sunny apartment they are charming, and the more they are shaken up the more fragrant they become. Lavender was called by the Romans lavandula. At cutting-time people travel from long distances to inhale the fragrance of the fields. In the eighteenth century lavender-water was the principal perfume of the ladies of that period. Then the fashion changed. Chemically-prepared perfumes imported from the Continent became the mode, and "sweet" lavender-water became almost unknown, except in country cottages. A lady who still cultivated the plant and manufactured the scent wrote to Queen Victoria asking her Majesty to use her great influence to restore this old English perfume to popularity, and she acquiesced.

COUGHS & COLDS

LEAD TO CONSUMPTION

Colds are the most dangerous of all forms of disease. A neglected cold leads to Bronchitis, Consumption, Pneumonia. "Coughs" are the result of irritated bronchial tubes. "PSYCHINE" cures coughs by removing the irritating particles and healing the inflamed membrane. It is a germicide and destroys the tubercle germ. It is a tonic that strengthens the lungs, the liver, and tones up the system. It makes for better health in all conditions of humanity. Get strong and the cough will disappear. "PSYCHINE" makes weak people strong. It cures coughs of the most obdurate kind and breaks up a cold in a few hours.

REMARKABLE ROOF GARDEN.

One of the most remarkable gardens in the world is established on the roof of the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy. There a botanist is experimenting with the use of drugs on plants, to determine the possibility of growing under artificial conditions plants from which valuable drugs are taken, and also to learn what effect drugs and chemicals have on plants.

The man who knows it all seldom makes good when it comes to action.

An Fire Spreads in dry grass, so does an inflammation in the throat grow down into the lungs. Deal promptly with a cold as with a fire, and when you begin to cough use Allen's Lung Balm.

A man's conscience seldom troubles him as much as the corn on his little toe.

Allen's Lung Balm is especially intended to break up neglected coughs, and many hopeless cases have been saved by its use. Contains no opium in any form.

They who would find perfection without pain are looking only to put an edge on a sword of lead.

Worms derange the whole system. Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator deranges worms and gives rest to the sufferer. It only costs 25 cents to try it and be convinced.

"What are you moving the church for?"

"That gown is as good as new," said her husband, "so if you don't intend to wear it again, why don't you give it to the cook?"

"Because she's a jewel, and I wouldn't deliberately do anything to drive her away," rejoined his wife. "The gown is out of style."

Always a Good Friend.—In health and happiness we need no friends but when pain and prostration come we look for friendly aid from sympathetic hands. These hands can serve us no better than in rubbing in Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil, for when the Oil is in the pain is out. It has brought relief to thousands who without it would be indeed friendless.

Small Politician—"I want to talk to you sir, about a remark you made about me in your paper. You called me a political jobber, sir?"

"Ah! Then you didn't mean to call me a 'jobber'?"

"No, sir. I wrote 'robber' very distinctly!"

Faultless in Preparation.—Unlike any other stomach regulator, Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are the result of long study of vegetable compounds calculated to stimulate the stomachic functions and maintain them at the normal condition. Years of use have proved their faultless character and established their excellent reputation. And this reputation they have maintained for years and will continue to maintain, for these pills must always stand at the head of the list of standard preparations.

INNOCENCE OF KITTENS.

Mr. Robert W. Yerkes raises the question whether kittens are born with a propensity to eat mice. Three Manx kittens kept in a cage for six weeks with a mouse, which was introduced when they were five months old, made no attempt to injure it, although they were hungry, until the mother cat was introduced and showed how mice should be treated. Other observers have noted the indisposition of kittens to attack mice, but the question whether mouse-killing is instinctive or educational with them can hardly be said to have been settled.

The professional point of view is rarely that of the humanitarian. A passenger on a London omnibus calls out to the conductor:

Zam-Bak is absolutely pure; contains no animal fat; no mineral coloring matter; no acid astringents; no burning antiseptics—yet it is antiseptic! It is purely herbal, and thus meets all the needs of the skin in that superior and all-powerful way in which nature alone provides.

BOYLE & SON,

Gentle Reader you who owe for this paper you are reading, as well as for several of its ancestors. Did you ever see an editor's pocket book? Well, it is just as fallible and prone to emptiness as those of other common mortals.
The newspaper business hasn't yet been brought to that degree of perfection that it can be run without expense, and until that is successfully done we shall be under the painful necessity of asking you for a little cash, now and then, especially now. We have been patient—in some cases long-suffering—knowing that your pocketbooks were about as lean and lank as our own. But now, the harvest is past and some of you have sold your hogs.
When the big round dollar begins to jingle in your pockets, please remember that vacuum in the editorial purse.

Obituary.

Early on Wednesday afternoon of last week there passed away at the Kingston general hospital, Grace, the only and beloved daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bailey Ham, of Morven. The little girl, she was but twelve years of age, had been in her accustomed good health till a few days ago. She was then stricken with appendicitis.
Everything was done for her comfort, but it was found advisable to remove the little sufferer to the hospital at Kingston. A consultation of city doctors was held but they gave no hope for ultimate recovery. Peritonitis developed, and an operation was performed late on Thursday as a last resort. But the disease had made too rapid a progress, and the little life yielded to the strain. Up to almost the last she was conscious, and talked with those about her, telling them she was not afraid to die. The remains were taken to the home at Morven on Thursday's noon train. Previous to the removal prayers were said by the Rev. Mr. Sellery at the residence of Mrs. M. F. Hughes, Clergy street,
Kingston, who is a sister of Mr. Ham.
The funeral was held on Sunday to the White church at Morven. The bereaved father and mother are almost broken-hearted over the loss of their only child. To them the sympathy of many friends is extended.

Asked for a Mandamus.

Mr. G. F. Rutlan has asked, on behalf of some ratepayers, for a Mandamus to compel the County Council to proceed at once with the erection of a county poor house. Ten days are allowed the County Council in which to take definite action. The County Council took the matter into consideration on Tuesday and have decided to send a deputation to Toronto next week to interview the authorities in the matter. The law seems to be plain and Mr. Rutlan in his mandamus asks the county council to obey the laws and look after the county's poor instead of saddling the cost on the various municipalities.

"David Holcomb"

At the Briscoe Opera House on Feb. 28th, will be offered in Napanee for the first time, "David Holcomb," with William Lawrence, a Canadian, in the title role. The play is entirely new and original in plot and different in conception from anything heretofore offered by this popular star. Mr. Lawrence will never be forgotten for the Uncle Josh he gave in "The Old Homestead," succeeding Denman Thompson for the past five seasons in that play. "David Holcomb" is now in its first year, comparatively new to the public, but wherever it has appeared, the public sentiment has run high in its favor. Lawrence has spent his summer vacation during the past three years up among the hills in old Vermont. It was there he met the characters he is using in "David Holcomb," drawing them from real life. The character he portrays, "Uncle David," lives on a farm near Rutland, Vermont; his good wife, Harris, in the same household; his drunken brother, Hiram, also finds shelter beneath the same roof. "Squire" Jackson runs the village hotel and sells "wet goods" intended to tickle the palates of the green mountain youths. Hank, the mischievous boy; Phoebe, the village organist; the village choir, and in fact all those who contribute towards the success of "David Holcomb" met Lawrence face to face in real life in old Vermont before he ever thought of introducing them into a play. Nothing has been overlooked to make the play a veritable country outing, in fact you can almost smell the fragrance of the meadow and hear the babbling of the brook as the curtain ascends on this masterpiece of rustic offering. Lawrence as "Uncle David," the good-natured, easy going, old, honest farmer is a Chinese puzzle. You can never tell when he is going to make you laugh, and you never suspect when he is going to make you cry. It is the best part he has had in his entire starring career and fits him

A circular has been issued by the G. T. R. warning engineers that they are not allowed to travel more than ten miles an hour over public crossings where there are no danger signals.

A number of wild geese going northward have been cited in the vicinity of Smith's Falls. This is claimed by old residents to be the earliest flight on record. It is considered an infallible sign of open, mild weather.

Harry Corby, the wealthy distiller of Belleville, at present in Europe, will, on his return, discuss with the Board of Trade a scheme for the erection at Kingston of a first-class hotel. He is willing to share in the venture.

The shipyard at Deseronto is a busy place just now. General repairs are being made to the schooners Theodore Voges, Horace Taber, steamer Aletha and steamer Salisbury. There is also a lot of yachts and fishing craft hauled out to receive general overhauling.

To guard the audience in moving pictures shows from the risks of fire, two provincial officers will be detailed on Mar. 1st to make a tour of the province with a view to rigorous inspection of moving picture shows. A prosecution of all operators and owners guilty of infractions of the Ontario regulations will be prosecuted.

Monday afternoon William Withers, a negro resident of Toronto, killed his wife and mother-in-law by shooting them with a revolver. He then barricaded himself in the house, and after shooting Policeman Morris in the left leg above the knee, held off a detachment of police for three hours, and then committed suicide by shooting himself in the month. Jealousy, which amounted almost to insanity, is believed to have been the motive.

According to a circular received, the Grand Sire of the I. O. O. F. Sovereign Grand Lodge has decreed that any member of the Oddfellows Order who belongs to the Oriental lodges, or participates in their meetings, will be expelled from the Order and any Oddfellow's lodge giving the use of their rooms to Orientals to hold meetings are liable to have their charters cancelled. Mahomet Sanctorum, in St. Thomas, with a large membership, will obey the order and disorganize at the next meeting.

Cartwright vs Napanee.
The above case came up at Osgood Hall, on Wednesday in Divisional Court. The original application was for an order that by-law No. 786 passed on August 3rd, 1908, by the corporation of the town, entitled a by-law to levy the rate necessary for raising the taxes for the year 1908 be quashed with costs, and at the hearing of motion before Clute, J., the motion was dismissed without costs. This motion is by way of appeal from that order and on fresh evidence permitted by the court to be taken. Argument was not concluded.

A Sudden Death.
A terrible sudden death occurred on Friday last when Mrs. A. G. Teel, (nee Mabel Smith) daughter of Mrs. John G. Smith, South Napanee, passed away after an illness of but a few hours. Deceased was apparently in the best of health, though at various times during the past few weeks she had complained of severe pains in the back of her head. Between four and five o'clock on Friday she was taken with the same pains in her head and passed away at ten o'clock in the evening. Medical aid was at once summoned but nothing could be done. Deceased was married about three years ago at Denver, Colo., to Mr. A. G. Teel, secretary to the rear Admiral in command of the U. S. Pacific fleet and after a few months of wedded bliss Mr. Teel was ordered to accompany his superior officer to China. During his absence his wife came to Napanee to stay with her mother and sisters until her husband's return. She was eagerly looking forward for August to arrive when her husband would be relieved on the foreign station and would come to Napanee for her and they would go to California to make a home. Her leisure time was employed in preparing linens and fancy work and she had accumulated a nice supply for their home which she was fated never to occupy. Besides her sorrowing mother, she leaves two brothers, George in the west and Don at home, and five sisters Mrs. Cook, Denver, Colorado, Mrs. Appleyard, Chicago, and Misses Edith Allie and Dorothy at home. The funeral took place on Sunday afternoon to Riverside cemetery vault. A large number of friends gathered to pay their last respects to a young woman whom they loved and for whose sorrowing relatives and husband they feel the deepest sympathy.

A GREAT TREAT.
Ralph Connor's new story "The Foreigner," has been bought by the Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal and publication will begin in two or three weeks. Ralph Connor's former stories "The Doctor," "The Prospector," "The Man from Glen-garry," and others have made him famous as a story writer, and "The Foreigner" is regarded by many as his best. It is a thrilling story of the Canadian West. It is said that the price was the biggest by far ever paid for a serial story. It will be a great treat to the readers of the Family Herald and Weekly Star and those who become subscribers to that great weekly during the next two weeks will be in time for the opening chapter. The beautiful picture "The Soul's Awakening" is still offered as a premium. The combination is the biggest dollar's worth in the market to-day.
